Big seven set oil import cut

By JIM ROBB
FP News Service

TOKYO — The leaders of seven industrial nations concluded their two-day economic summit here Friday with a stern declaration calling for reduced oil imports from now to 1985 coupled with strong condemnation of the OPEC action drastically increasing world oil prices this week.

For Canada, the commitment to restraint means it will reduce its average annual rate of growth of oil consumption to one per cent. Oil consumption is currently increasing at a rate of two per cent a year, a federal official said here Friday.

Imports of oil into Canada currently run at some 180,000 barrels net a day, to be reduced to 150,000 barrels per day in 1980 to meet a commitment made by member countries of the international energy agency to reduce demand by five per cent.

Between 1980 and 1985 imports were projected to climb to 650,000 barrels a day to cope with declining Alberta oil production.

The one-per-cent decrease in the rate of consumption means that Canada will drop its imports by 50,000 barrels a day by 1985.

Prime Minister Joe Clark, echoing remarks by the other leaders, told a press briefing the world would see the Tokyo meeting as an "historic summit."

"Canada enjoys a privileged situation," Clark said, "since Canada has abundant energy resources."

But he warned that the decline in conventional oil production in Alberta between 1980 and 1985 will be "dramatic."

"We have firmly decided to keep our imports as low as possible," he declared, repeating his pledge to make Canada selfsufficient in energy by 1990.

He said his Conservative government "will accelerate conservation measures" and replace oil with other sources of conventional and non-conventional energy.

Clark saida, "I am convinced our countries can deal with the energy problems."

President Jimmy Carter of the United States told the press that the summit participants "spoke out forcefully about the actions of OPEC, in raising world oil prices by some 60 per cent since December."

The latest jump this week moved the base world price for a barrel of oil from $14.55 U.S. to $18, with a high of $23.50 when surcharges and premiums usually demanded by Arab countries are added on. Canada has a domestic price of $13.75, but is committed to moving up to the world level.

Carter said the increase "would have a serious, worldwide influence. It will make for less growth, more unemployment, and endanger economic stability."

The U.S. president said the summit "was the first time a group of world leaders has spoken out forcefully about actions by OPEC," the Arabdominated oil cartel.

Carter said the OPEC action would have an "adverse" effect on developing nations.

Dailies launch 'new look'

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Vancouver's two daily newspapers returned today with a new look designed to attract subscribers and make the papers easier to read.

Though the Sun and Province have been shut down for the past eight months by a labor dispute, work went on behind the scenes to reorganize and redesign the major dailies.

Both papers are switching to a format which features more complete sections devoted to specific interest areas, such as sports, travel, business and entertainment.

The Sun will put much more emphasis on "the soft side of the business" — lifestyles, family and food items — directed at female readers.

The paper will also focus very heavily on entertainment.

The Province plans to have tabloid size pull-out sections on sports, business and entertainment.

After an eight-month absence, the name of the game is to get people to buy the paper again, something they've learned to live without.

The Sun had a press run today of 300,000 and contained an eight-page section recapping events that took place during the labor dispute.

Refugees fight way in

HONG KONG (UPI) — Hundreds of Vietnamese "boat people" broke a 20-week sea blockade Friday, battled police with firebombs and rocks and escaped into Hong Kong territory.

Secretary for Security Lewis M. Davies said crewmen on the freighter Skyluck, which carried 2,665 refugees, cut both anchor chains during a storm and let the disabled ship drift to land.

Davies said naval and police boats sped to the scene but were held back "by those on board throwing missiles at the police and their launches."

Davies said "several hundred" refugees jumped overboard and swam ashore. Many fled into the hills of the island before police reinforcements could cordon off the area.

By nightfall, authorities had rounded up or taken off the ship about 2,000 people. They were ferried to a prison converted into a refugee camp, Lewis said.

The dramatic breakaway, in which one 18-year-old girl was injured, came hours before British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington flew to the crown colony from the Tokyo economic summit to examine the refugee situation.

At Cherating in Malaysia, refugee officials Friday disclosed authorities had ordered more than 400 Vietnamese aboard a boat and towed them out into the South China Sea, but brought them back when two died. It was Malaysia's first forcible deportation of refugees who had already landed and been accepted in refugee camps.

Fish plant moratorium

A moratorium on new B.C. fish-processing licences was slapped on today by Environment Minister Rafe Mair.

The move follows complaints from the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, which says the fish-processing industry has been taken over by foreign owners, costing British Columbians hundreds of jobs

Mair says companies with licences will have them renewed next year but the ministry will also demand the companies provide full financial disclosure.

He also said both the province and the federal government will study the extent and effect of foreign control in the industry.

In Vancouver, union secretary George Hewison said the actions would go partway to meeting the concerns of B.C.'s fishermen.

He said Mair has met three of the four requests the union made.

Hewison said the UFAWU wanted and got the provincial government to put a moratorium on new licences, make full disclosure of foreign control and to ask the federal government for restrictions on exports of unprocessed fish.

Not dealt with, he said, was a union request for actions against processing at sea.

Hewison said he will discuss the remaining issue with Mair at the earliest opportunity.

Today's actions were welcome but possibly too late, Hewison said.

"British Columbia should have acted more than two years ago to stop the foreign takeover of the industry."

In Victoria, a spokesman for Oakland Fisheries Ltd. expressed surprise by the moratorium announcement. However, he would make no immediate comment.

All sports challenged

Hampton Park Hustlers today challenged all other slow-pitch softball teams in the district to try and out-hustle the Hustlers in the sixth annual Great Inner Tube race July 29 in the Gorge.

The Hustlers, who organize the race under the sponsorship of the Victoria Times, in fact, are challenging teams in all other sports.

"We wonder, for example, how the Cougars (Junior hockey team) would do in a summer sport," said Hustlers spokesman Bob Painton.

"I hope the Cougars have the courage to enter a team — and I hope they're smart enough to take off their skates or they'll puncture their inner tubes."

The Times will publish responses to the challenge and if you're in a challenging mood, hurl one by phoning the Victoria Times at 382-3131 and asking for Al Forrest, co-ordinator of the event for the paper.

The Great Inner Tube race involves two paddlers on an inner tube. The tubes can be obtained from a truck tire shop or junkyard. There are three separate races: two men, two women and mixed pairs.

Entry fee is $5 per tube with all net proceeds going to help amateur sport. All contestants must be 16 or older.

About 800 entries are expected in the race this year. Spectators along the one-kilometre route are expected to number close to 20,000.

Painton said he hopes all sports will be represented in this year's race.

"We would like to see teams from soccer, basketball, football, rugby, hockey, lacrosse, baseball and slow-pitch fastball leagues as well as from police and fire departments.

"We also expect there will be entries from the Vancouver Canucks and the Shamrocks."

There is a parade in connection with the race and marching bands are welcome. Parade entrants may phone Painton at 386-0730.

Patchwork quilting catch on

People are going just a little nutty over patchwork and quilting as a hobby.

And one of the people keeping the craze going is an Edmonton woman, Kathy Faryon, whose weekly column now appears in many Canadian newspapers and draws a tremendous response.

In answer to numerous requests from readers who have seen Kathy Faryon's columns elsewhere, the Victoria Times will run it every Friday in the Family section. Appropriately, the column is titled Patchwork and Quilting and it begins today on page 31.

First 'walk' in today

The Times' first Walk of the Week wandered astray Thursday, the first day it was to appear as a regular weekly feature.

But it appears today on page 23 and from here on in, it will be in the Times every Thursday, allowing families and others interested in walking, to get organized and make plans for weekend outings.

'Despicable' to tell of probe

MONTREAL (CP) — MP Marc Lalonde (L—Outremont) said Thursday it was "despicable" of Transport Minister Don Mazankowski to announce publicly that he is looking into pension and severance pay given Mr. Justice Yves Pratte when he resigned as chairman of Air Canada four years ago.

Lalonde's comment, made in an interview, came on the heels of Pratte's announcement that he is resigning for health reasons from the Supreme Court of Canada, to which he was appointed almost two years ago.

"That's no way to proceed," Lalonde, the former federal justice minister, said of Mazankowski's actions.

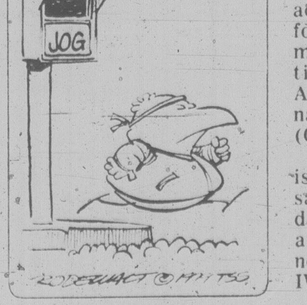
"If a minister has questions, he should look into them. If he finds something, he makes it public.

"But if he finds nothing he should shut up," Lalonde said.

Air Canada reportedly gave Pratte $200,000 in severance pay and a pension based on 20 years of service, although he headed the airline for only seven years.

Lalonde said generous pensions and severance pay are not unusual for senior officials of large companies.

Jamie Burns, Mazankowski's executive assistant, said in an interview from Ottawa that the transport minister never intended to imply there was impropriety in the airline's dealings with Pratte.



PPWC rejects industry offer

One of B.C.'s two pulp and paper industry unions rejected a contract offer Thursday night.

About 5,500 members of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada (PPWC) voted 72 per cent to reject the industry's latest offer.

But the union's president said his group will take no action until it knows what the forest industry's two other major unions, the International Woodworkers of America (IWA) and the Canadian Paperworkers Union (CPU), are going to do.

"We're not going to act in isolation," Angus McPhee said in an interview Thursday night. "We will temper any decision we make by noting the votes of both the IWA and the CPU."

He said the executive is meeting next Wednesday to discuss future action. The union is legally entitled to strike when the current contract expires Saturday.

McPhee said, however, he could not rule out the possibility of wildcat strikes by workers in the union's nine locals at pulp mills throughout the province.

About 7,500 CPU members took a strike vote this week, and union officials said Thursday night results indicated that the vote in favor of a strike was beyond expectations.

An IWA spokesman said Thursday that about 30,000 coastal forest workers will not vote on the contract until sometime after next Tues-

VGH defies gov't on budget

One of Victoria's two acute care hospitals is set to take on the provincial government over financing and the second is considering similar action.

The move by Victoria General Hospital and the fact Royal Jubilee is also considering a tough stand seems certain to bring a confrontation with the government in the coming year.

The VGH board voted Thursday to spend money at a level which will guarantee the existing level of patient care even if it means the hospital goes in the hole financially.

An RJH spokesman said today the hospital's board decided Thursday to wait a month before making a decision to go the same route.

Union agreements at VGH run out Dec. 31 and the hospital's board has told staff there will be no pay increases or increased fringe benefits from Jan. 1 to the end of the fiscal year on March 31, 1980.

Executive director Jim Fair said today, however, that most collective agreements are not settled for several months down the line.

He said the hospital budget, while able to absorb 1979 wage hikes, cannot cover any more wage increases before the end of the fiscal year.

Finance director Roy Welham said Thursday the hospital will probably be $1 million in the red by the end of the fiscal year.

He said some cost savings could reduce the amount to $700,000 or $800,000 but any wage increases after Jan. 1 could easily raise the deficit to more than $1 million.

The board then approved a 14-item list of various cost-cutting measures.

The list ranged from a tougher stance on employee sick leave that could save $50,000, to making board members stand in line in the cafeteria instead of being served at tables.

The hospital pays for board members' meals when they attend evening meetings. The board was told $2,000 could be saved if they paid for their own meals.

Personnel director Mike O'Brien said the sick leave

Sun publisher Clark Davey says circulation before the strike-lockout was 242,000 and he will be disappointed if the paper has lost more than 20 per cent of those readers.

He said because it is summer and people are taking holidays it will probably be September before the papers get a solid idea of where they stand on circulation.

Davey says his goal is 250,000 at the end of the year.

Province publisher Paddy Sherman said his paper's pre-strike circulation was about 136,000.

He says the paper dropped about 10,000 to 15,000 subscribers during the three-month strike in 1970 but that number was picked up within months after the dispute was settled.

"I am hoping the same thing happens again."

Sherman says the return-to-work went surprisingly well.

Although there was some mention during the labor dispute of Pacific Press producing a Sunday paper, there has been no decision made yet, Sherman said.

The Province lost about 12 people from its editorial section which had a total staff of 111.

The Sun lost about 15 editorial people through resignations but both Davey and Sherman say the figures are only slightly higher than the normal turnover in the newsrooms.

Sherman says it is too early to tell how many of those will stay away as some are still coming back.

One gain for the Province is the acquisition of Jim Taylor, the widely-read Sun sports columnist, who also appeared in the Times, who left the Sun during the dispute because of a conflict over freelance work.

Sherman said the Province has the same restrictions on freelance work as the Sun but Taylor has formed his own freelance company and will be doing a daily column for the morning paper on that basis.

The Sun also lost award-winning and highly-popular cartoonist Len Norris who retired. But Davey says he will still contribute a couple of cartoons a week.

Controversial columnist Doug Collins, who stayed on the Sun management staff throughout the strike, has now gone to the Vancouver Courier, which goes daily Wendesday. He also left the Sun because of the no-freelance ruling.

He replaced Stu Keate last year and arrived on the scene Nov. 1, the day the strike-lockout began.

"I keep telling myself to remain calm and cool," he says.

"The last couple of weeks has been an emotional roller-coaster ride for everybody here."

He says there haven't been any serious production problems despite the long layoff.

And during the dispute management and non-union people were working on special items for the Sun when it got back on track.

"Readers will get a rich diet for the first couple of weeks," he says.

The single-copy price of both papers will go up to 25 cents from 20 but the Saturday edition will remain at 25 cents and the home-delivery charge will stay at $4 a month.

Beginning next Wednesday, the Province will be competing with another daily morning newspaper.

The Daily Courier is switching over from twice a week to publishing six days a week, Sunday through Friday.

Although Sherman maintains he is not concerned, Courier managing editor Cliff Barr says the new paper has the old one worried.

"We are the only paper with upbeat momentum in this town," he says, explaining that the two established dailies are gearing up from a standing start whereas the Courier has been gaining ground throughout the strike-lockout.

Barr says his paper increased its combined paid and street-sale circulation to 56,000, 50 per cent higher than before the Pacific Press shutdown.

He also says the Courier has acquired 10 key people from the two senior dailies, people who "relate to the city."

Barr describes the Sun and the Province as boring and says the Courier will provide an attractive alternative by focusing more on human interest and off-beat stories.

Sherman says those at the Courier will find their assignment very interesting.

"I think they will also find it very discouraging."

Another paper which has gained circulation as a result of the Pacific Press shutdown is the Columbian in New Westminster.

Publisher Rikk Taylor says circulation went from 30,000 paid subscribers and 60,000 free copies to 50,000 paid and 40,000 distributed free.

He said the strike-lockout has strengthened the Columbian's hold on the suburban communities and that situation will likely remain.

Another facet of the eight-month newspaper shutdown is the effect on the businesses which advertise through the two papers.

A Vancouver Board of Trade spokesman says the board did a survey of some of the major retail outlets early this year when the strike was only a couple of months old and found that it was having very little effect on the advertisers.

However, a spokesman for one of those outlets, Eaton's, said Thursday that although the major department stores and other large companies learned to live without the two papers, it was very harmful for the smaller businesses.

day when the union's executive meets in Vancouver to draft recommendations on the latest offer from B.C.'s 128 forest companies, negotiated through Forest Industrial Relations.

The industry has offered all three unions wage and fringe benefits totalling 21 per cent in a two-year contract. The present base rate is $8.16 an hour.

Offers to about 15,000 Interior IWA members will probably be similar to the offer made to coastal forest workers. Contracts in the southern Interior expire Saturday while contracts in the northern Interior expire Aug. 30.

McPhee said PPWC members turned down the offer from the Pulp and Paper Labor Relations Bureau, bargaining for the pulp industry, mainly because proposed improvements to pension benefits were insufficient.

"The industry seems to have an out-of-sight, out-of-mind attitude when it comes to pensions," he said.

Members were also concerned about the lack of a cost-of-living clause in the proposed contract, he said.

The CPU also wants improved pension benefits for members who retired before a new plan was introduced in 1975. Art Gruntman, western CPU vice-president, said those workers now receive only $162 a month.

Gruntman said a severe newsprint shortage also gives the unions an opportunity to apply more pressure on employers.

"And we're going to enjoy doing it, putting the squeeze on them," he said.

As IWA negotiators took the latest offer to members, IWA regional president Jack Munro said the companies have moved substantially on their contract offer, which would increase wages 90 cents an hour in the first year and an additional 9.5 per cent in the second. Base rates would climb to $9.92 an hour.

Kept prisoner 20 years — by mother

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Charlotte Elaine Mottinger told police she has been a prisoner in her mother's home for almost 20 years — frequently beaten, bound hand and foot and locked in a bathroom for days at a time.

Long Beach Police said they freed the grown but child-like woman late Wednesday when she was found tied in the back seat of her mother's car.

The mother, Ethel Mae Mottinger, 61, of Long Beach was arrested and held in lieu of $1,000 bail on suspicion of false imprisonment, police said.

Thomas Hibbison, one of two policemen who found the 33-year-old woman, told a news conference Thursday that Miss Mottinger did not appear undernourished, although she was small and slightly built. He said he first thought she was about 15 years old.

She had three bruises on her head, Hibbison said. The woman was staying with relatives here after being freed by police.

Hibbison said he and his partner, Allan Huff, stopped a car driven by Mrs. Mottinger at about 8:20 p.m. Wednesday after being notified of a possible kidnapping.

Inside were two small children — Mrs. Mottinger's niece and nephew — and, in the back seat, Miss Mottinger, bound and tied to a bolt in the floorboard, the officer said.

Police said that after being released, the woman was trembling and visibly frightened, and asking over and over: "You're not going to drown me, are you?"

Police said her mother was telling her: "Don't talk to them."

Miss Mottinger later told police her mother had warned repeatedly that if she ever talked to police, they would beat her and drown her, police said.

The woman said the ordeal began at age 13, when her father died, Hibbison said. Miss Mottinger said she spent days tied up in a bathroom without food and was beaten with electrical cords, a broom, a belt and, at least once, with a soft drink bottle. She said she was fed mostly a concoction of rice, corn, bread and water, he said.

Mrs. Mottinger told authorities her daughter was retarded and diabetic.

But police said the daughter was treated at St. Mary's Medical Centre in Long Beach a year ago and hospital records indicate she was neither retarded nor diabetic.

People

Oldest person now 114 years

The oldest person on earth according to the Guinness Book of Records, Shigechiyo Izumi, celebrated his 114th birthday today in Japan, and his relatives said he doesn't have an ache in his bones. He gets up at 7 in the morning, takes the dog for a walk, meets newlyweds who come to see him everyday and drinks about a half pint of spirits every night before he goes to sleep at 8, Chiyo Izumi, his nephew's wife said. A ceremony was held by 300 well-wishers at a primary school gymnasium on Tokunoshima Island, 1,200 kilometres southwest of Tokyo, where Izumi lives, to celebrate his birthday.

Conservative candidate Pat Carney lost the May 22 federal election by 95 votes but will set up a storefront office in the riding of Vancouver Centre anyway, campaign manager Lyall Knott said Thursday. He said Carney will not seek to overturn the election in her constituency, which she lost to Liberal Art Phillips after a judicial recount. But, because results were so close, Carney will set up a storefront office in about a month to help the 15,000 people who voted for her, said Knott.

Roland Michener, Canada's governor-general from 1967 to 1974, was honored Thursday with the 1979 Freedom Festival award for outstanding contribution to the cause of freedom, peace and international co-operation. Michener, 79, said he was surprised by his selection for the award because he expected to be more anonymous after being out of office for six years. Michener currently is a chancellor of Queen's University in Kingston, Ont.

Gordon Barnes didn't know quite what to think when he found a money clip containing $478 beside the highway through his hometown of Gananoque, Ont., last week. But he knew one thing. "It wasn't mine," the 58-year-old farmer said when asked why he immediately handed the money over to police. The money had lain for two months by the side of the busy highway about 25 kilometres east of Kingston, dropped accidentally by Balu Curiya of Carleton Place, Ont., when he stopped his car because of mechanical difficulties. Curiya had gone back later but could not find the money.

Teen idol Rex Smith delivered a cool performance at Toronto's Ontario Place Forum, but then had to flee the stage to escape 4,000 frenzied teen-aged girls. But there was no break in his singing — since he doesn't have a back-up band yet, he lip-synched to a tape, mimicking the songs on his recent album. His voice continued to fill the hall until a technician managed to reach the tape and switch it off.

An intestinal growth removed from Israel's Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan during surgery last weekend was malignant, his surgeon said Thursday. However, Dr. Boleslav Goldman told Israel Television there are no indications that the cancerous growth will spread.

A transcontinental bicycle trip has ended in New York with two weary California tandem bicycle teams claiming to have set a national record with their 10-day, 21-hour and 45-minute ride from San Diego to New York. Escorted by police, the four men rode their two cycles through the Holland Tunnel from New Jersey and then to City Hall, arriving at 5:15 a.m. "I'm a little weary," said Brooks McKinney, 27, of San Diego. "It feels like I've sent my body though a meat grinder." McKinney's tandem partner was Bruce Hall, a 32-year-old San Diego school teacher. The other bike was ridden by Peter Pennseyer, a 38-year-old nuclear engineer from Dana Point, Calif., and Rob Templin, 23, of San Diego, a sporting equipment salesman.

Socialist 'pirates' blocked

PARIS (AP) — Police blockaded a group of French Socialist leaders inside a building from which they were attacking the government over a pirate radio transmitter Thursday.

It was the most serious incident so far in a growing confrontation between President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's government and the Socialists, France's third largest political party.

Among the Socialists who defied a law against unauthorized broadcasting was party leader and presidential contender Francois Mitterrand. His speech was prerecorded and he was not present when police raided the building.

Party spokesman Laurent Fabius told reporters by telephone: "We are under siege for no reason . . . The police have forbidden us to leave."

The Socialists refused to let the police into the room from which they were broadcasting because the officers had no warrant, Fabius said. A police commissioner told them a warrant was unnecessary since he had caught them in the act.

1 in 400 Americans millionaire

NEW YORK (AP) — One of every 400 Americans is a millionaire and the number is increasing, says a report by U.S. Trust Co. of New York.

About 520,000 Americans are millionaires, compared with last year's 450,000, says the report, which gives approximate figures developed through the use of a computer model.

The last government figures, for 1972, said there were 180,000 millionaires in the United States.

More millionaires choose to live in New York than any other state — 51,031, the report says.

Other states in the top 10 are California, 33,509; Illinois, 31,131; Ohio, 27,607; Florida, 26,647; New Jersey, 26,565; Indiana, 24,345; Idaho, 23,797; Minnesota, 22,873, and Texas, 21,051.

Quake rattles southern Calif.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One person said it was like going to a disco, and another said it was like being slapped on the back, as an earthquake centred 144 kilometres east of here shook inland Southern California all the way to San Diego.

The quake registered 4.4 on the Richter scale at about 10:53 p.m. Thursday, according to Kate Hutton, a seismologist at California Technological Institute in Pasadena. She said the quake was centred in Big Bear, a resort community in the San Bernardino Mountains.

San Bernardino County Sheriff's Deputy Joe Kempfer in Big Bear said no damage or injuries were reported.

"It was just like going to a disco," he said.

According to sheriff's dispatcher Donald Renfrow, "It wasn't a jolt exactly, it just tipped the chair a little bit. The other fellow working next to me felt it, but he didn't know what it was, so he didn't say anything."

He said the quake "felt like somebody slapped me on the back."

San Diego police reported the tremor was also felt in the downtown area of the city.

The quake also shook the residents of Hemet, about 56 kilometres due south of Big Bear, but no damage or injuries were reported.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a ten-fold increase in magnitude. A reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5. An earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in the local area.

Sandinistas withdraw in Managua

MANAGUA (UPI) — President Anastasio Somoza's national guard has reoccupied eastern Managua, rounding up suspected Sandinista sympathizers and knocking down barricades abandoned by guerrillas in a retreat to the rebel-held city of Masaya.

The rebel withdrawal Thursday eased the immediate military pressure on Somoza, who later in the day vowed to "stay in power at all costs."

Foreign missionaries working in the shantytown eastern Managua neighborhoods reoccupied by the guard charged that government troops tortured and executed many suspected rebel sympathizers, including teen-age boys as young as 14.

The missionaries, who asked not to be identified for fear of reprisals, told foreign reporters the suspects were named by paid informers who received bounties of up to $500.

They said they personally knew of at least 10 recent executions, two preceded by electric shock torture to the chest, eyes and genitals.

The guerrillas in eastern Managua came under almost constant guard air, artillery, armor and infantry attacks for more than two weeks before beginning their orderly retreat just before dawn. A 1,500-man Sandinista column moved in an orderly march to Masaya, 16 miles southeast of the capital.

Military analysts said the Sandinistas would probably regroup in Masaya and attempt to push south to link up with the 1,000-man southern army still stalemated in the drive on Rivas, 68 miles from Managua, just above the Costa Rican border.

Life in Managua took on a semblance of normality with a number of gas stations opening, makeshift markets springing up, and little shooting heard in the city center. However, a 7 p.m.-to-4 a.m. curfew remained in effect.

The United States kept up diplomatic efforts to bring an end to the four-week civil war, but no progress was evident.

The new U.S. ambassador, Lawrence A. Pezzullo, presented Somoza with a note from President Carter urging him to resign, diplomatic sources said, so that he could be replaced with a broadly based, interim government "to lead a transition to democracy."

Somoza's specific reply to Pezzullo was not known, but he told reporters by telephone from his bunker, "I will stay in power at all costs."

Can you blame them?

The British Columbia legislature is not a place where solemn pledges made by politicians carry too much authority with the electorate. People have learned to discount the promises they make in an election campaign or legislative debate. Does anyone really believe what a politician says? Can you put your faith in what a political leader promises to do? How often has he done the unpopular but correct thing?

Politicians complain sometimes that the public and the press treat them as pariahs. We have become too hard and cynical in our attitudes towards the men and women who operate our government.

There are a number of reasons for the present low opinion most people have of the political process, not all of them within the power of the politicians to change. They are often unfairly blamed for things entirely beyond their control, or anybody's control.

But when British Columbians witness the way their legislature transforms a noble and popular gesture into a sad little charade — the way it has dealt with the now six-year-old pledge to provide $2¼ million to help Vietnamese children — then our MLAs deserve all the opprobrium heaped on their heads.

Premier Bill Bennett has dissembled so much on this matter he has tied his government up in contradictions. To give him some credit, he is obviously too embarrassed to come right out and state his government's opposition to helping the poor, sick child victims of war.

He blames the special legislative committee which was struck to decide how to spend the money which was unanimously voted by the legislature in 1973. It didn't report back with any specific recommendations, he claims.

"What money? The committee never reported. What do you want me to do?" he told the legislature this week, as if the committee had a life and authority of its own and was not subservient to the legislature and government which the premier heads.

The committee's authority lapsed at the end of the legislative session. It was not reconstituted the following year. Of course it couldn't report. If the premier seriously wanted the committee to report with a recommendation, it would have been done. It wasn't, and people are left to draw their own conclusions about the worth of a unanimous promise by the politicians of B.C.

If they are cynical about a premier who says in 1977 that the obligation to help Vietnamese children "remains with all of us" and two years later shrugs his shoulders, can you blame them?

The next best answer

The best place to settle the long-standing planning conflicts between Saanich and the Capital Regional District is probably in the courts.

No matter if a compromise is worked out on the current specific conflict — the proposed Tillicum shopping centre — the general debate will continue until an impartial outside body decides whether the regional plan or Saanich's local plans will be supreme in matters of major Saanich developments.

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier can be criticized for the approach he has taken to the regional board. It ill behooves him to encourage regional involvement in the Helmcken Road area because neighboring Saanich might be affected, yet to reject all regional input into the Tillicum plan even though the shopping centre would surely affect the economy of the western communities.

All the same, Couvelier has a good point when he points out the absurdity of having decisions made by duly-elected Saanich representatives subject to the control of representatives from outside his municipality.

The best answer would probably be some changes to the Municipal Act making abundantly clear the division of powers between a regional district and a municipality in matters of planning and zoning.

If that isn't forthcoming from the provincial government, however, the next best answer would probably be a court decision defining the powers at least for the Capital Regional District and its member municipalities.

The security is suffocating

TOKYO — A more exquisite example of fragile feminity would be hard to imagine. Diminutive, apple-cheeked, almond-eyed, wearing a fawn-colored, silk kimono and a nervous smile, she stood by the elevator door to hold it open whenever someone went in and to bow low whenever someone came out.

One other thing worth knowing about this coy chrysanthemum who watches the elevator doors of the 28th floor of the New Otani Hotel which is where Prime Minister Joe Clark and the Canadian delegation are staying during the economic summit meeting — she's a member of an elite squad of policewomen.

"The Japanese government expresses that priority for this conference is to get it over without an incident," comments a senior member of the Canadian delegation. "That's also the second, third, and fourth priority. Bringing off a summit meeting that actually does something is about their fifth priority."

Workaholics?

The summit is the first conference of its kind ever held in Japan. It is this country's signal to the world that it has arrived as an economic superpower. As well, it is Japan's answer to the recent, confidential but leaked, European Economic Community document which described the Japanese as "workaholics living in rabbit hutches." (This comment is a cheap crack but there's no doubt it has rubbed sensitivites raw. In interviews with Japanese officials and businessmen, all three mentioned it.)

To show the world what it can do, the Japanese government has left nothing undone. Traffic in downtown Tokyo, customarily the worst in the world, has been reduced by two-thirds by the simple device of sending a circular to citizens suggeting they keep their cars at home "in the national interest." The New Otani Hotel has been emptied of guests for a week and the prices slashed to a throwaway $1.70 a night for a medium-sized room. The suites of visiting cabinet ministers are knee-deep in flowers and baskets of fruit. Summit veterans say the technical facilities are the best ever.

The government's main attempt to make certain that the conference gets by without incident has been to make certain that nothing and nobody can get by its security arrangements. The security is omnipresent, obtrusive and oppressive. The New Otani Hotel and the nearby Akasaka Palace where the actual meeting will be held have been turned into fortresses.

More than 30,000 stand guard around the hotel and palace or sit inside grey police buses parked on both sides of all approach roads. To leave the hotel, except as part of an official motorcade, a delegate or a reporter has to walk half a mile to the furthest check point to pick up a taxi. To get back in again requires five checks of identification and, at the hotel entrance, a search of all handbags and briefcases.

All of this is just what goes on outside. Inside the hotel, plainclothes policemen stand in pairs about 50 feet apart, along each corridor. One woman reporter was reduced to tears when security agents refused to allow her to go back to her hotel room from which she'd come down to the main lobby without bringing her identity card with her.

In an improved version of Catch-22, the agents refused to let the reporter return to her room to pick up her card because, as they explained, without her card she was not allowed to visit any room, even if accompanied by security agents. (The reporter was saved by a passing Canadian official who vouched for her.)

So much for the second grade security. The first grade staff is reserved for the actual visiting heads of government. When Clark leaves his hotel room for an official meeting, more than a dozen plainclothes policemen watch him make the short walk from his suite to the elevator. On the ground floor, another two dozen will form a protect ve wing around Clark the instant he steps out of the elevator.

While Clark, or any other government leader actually walks through the hotel lobby every official reporter or hotel worker in sight will be halted by arm-waving police and be kept motionless until Clark has made it to his limousine.

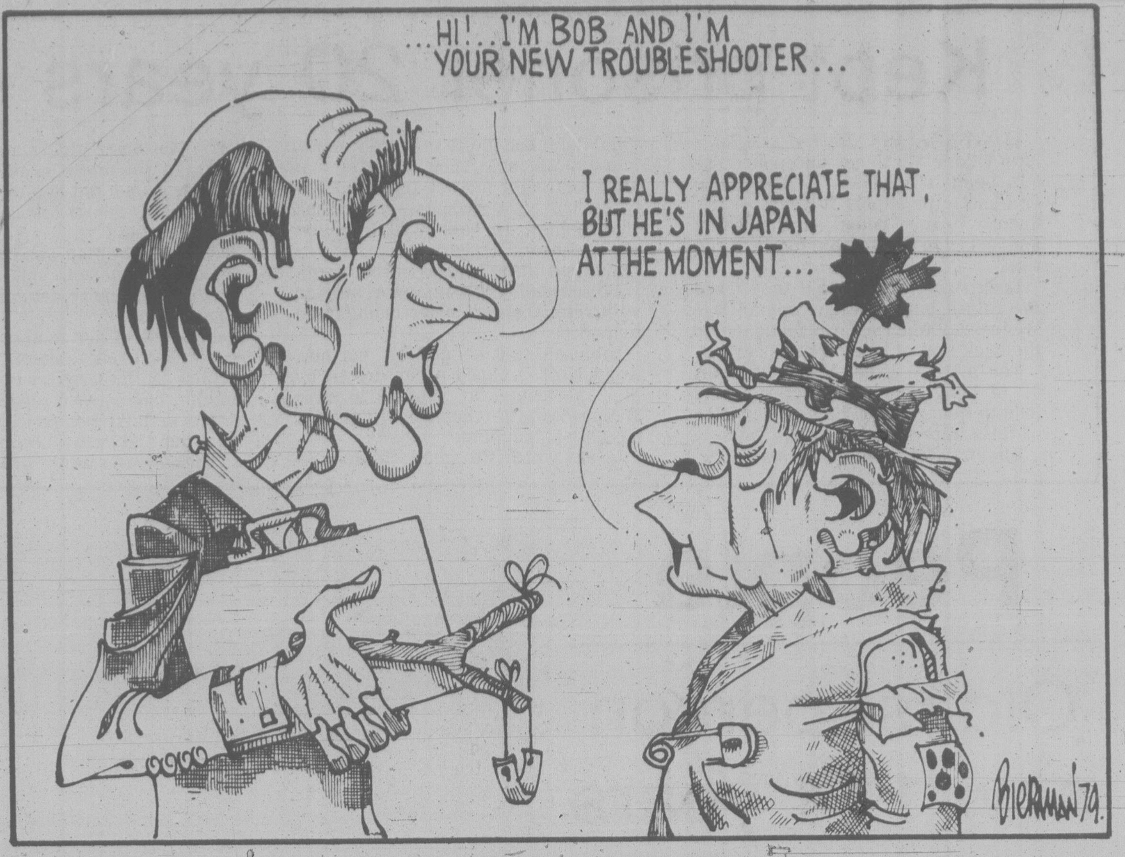
Predictably, the government's frenetic determination to ensure that the conference will be incident-free, has itself created an incident. A busload of U.S. reporters blocked from entering the U.S. embassy while President Carter was visiting it came close to blows with policemen. One European correspondent used the occasion of a reception hosted by a Japanese journalist for visiting reporters, to have a declaration read out to the gathering denouncing the security arrangement as "appalling."

No frail flower

Indeed, the arrangements are appalling. Yet they are not, necessarily, unnecessary. Japanese Red Army terrorists jammed communications between Tokyo airport and Carter's plane. A week before the summit, terrorists crashed a gasoline-laden truck against a police barricade in front of Akasaka Palace.

Mostly, though, the security arrangements are just Japanese. Confronted by any problem, whether exporting enough manufactured goods to pay for its raw material imports, or of thinning out Tokyo traffic so that visitors will be impressed, the Japanese consistently overdo it.

At times, when trying to cope with the inscrutable foreigner the Japanese though, do get it just right. The frail flower of the 28th floor for example. Except that a Deep Throat told me, I'd never have guessed for an instant that she holds a "dan," or top grade in aikido, which is a variation of judo. Luckily, therefore, I didn't try to act on the urgings of an official whose room was down the corridor from Clark's that I "make a run for Clark's door just to see how far you could get." Ahout a foot, at a guess.



...HI!..I'M BOB AND I'M YOUR NEW TROUBLESHOOTER...

John Wayne for president

NEW YORK — On May 29, Gladys Smith died at the age of 86. On June 11, Marion Morrison died at age 72. On Jan. 20, 1981, someone named Carter or Reagan or Connally or Kennedy, or none of the above, will be inaugurated as the 39th president of the United States.

Gladys Smith was better known as Mary Pickford, "America's Sweetheart," and Marion Morrison was recognized the world over as John Wayne, often called Duke by friends and namedroppers. And there will be those who will be persuaded that the next president (at least when he takes the oath, if not necessarily for long thereafter) is Prince of Peace, Superman, Range Boss, Son of Camelot, perhaps even Guru.

Take-charge guy wanted

So Mary Pickford, John Wayne and the next president have more in common than most Americans realize or want to admit. Hollywood blends illusion with reality so seamlessly that the dividing line becomes imperceptible. And as winning elections has come to depend more and more upon television, in politics, too, the image has been superimposed upon reality. In the great tradition of the American dream factory, as Marion Morrison metamorphosed into John Wayne, a fallible human being transforms him or herself into something larger, more promising, more appealing.

This is not, of course, a one-sided process. An image takes two — one to create it and one to accept it. Just as the American people wanted Mary Pickford instead of Gladys Smith, they wanted a president who would never tell them a lie rather than an inexperienced governor of Georgia. As they gladly accepted John Wayne, the man who knew right from wrong, they search now for a president who will take charge, straighten things out.

Perhaps the race survives on its illusions. Perhaps, for example, the illusion of "America's Sweetheart" — a golden-curled moppet, sweet, loyal, lovable and innocent — eased the pain of real life and hard time for the generations fo Americans who idolized Mary Pickford, the eternal child-woman.

But few realized that Gladys Smith was, in fact, a hardheaded business operator who not only had the good sense to quit acting in 1933 before she ceased to fit Mary Pickford's image, but who was the first star to control all aspects of her films, including distribution, and who successfully invested the resulting wealth in land, oil and other holdings. In the 1950s, I worked for a newspaper that was co-owner with her of a prosperous television station. She had been an early investor in what turned out to be the television bonanza.

But to maintain the image of the child-woman, Mary Pickford seldom let the public see the shrewd and effective executive. She wanted to be what she seemed, not what she was. In her last years, she was never seen in public, and seldom by anyone other than her husband. "They have my movies," she said in 1978. "Let them remember me that way."

Not only was she literally captured by her own image and afraid to appear outside of it; no one will ever know how many millions of American women also were imprisoned by the illusion she created — cast as funny little innocents, kept figuratively in curls and pinafores, and expected to be child-women in the likeness of America's Sweetheart.

John Wayne created an even larger illusion, and it is noteworthy that congress voted him a medal for it. No one pretended that the medal was for great acting. It was not even for the creation of the image, although that was his one undeniable achievement; it was for the image itself: "John Wayne, American."

Over his obituary in The New York Times, the headline read: "Duke, an American Hero." President Carter even said he "reflected the best of our national character." But Elizabeth Taylor, who had the courage to defy her own image, knew better:

"Big John," she said (note that we have a Republican candidate who likes that same handle), "was to America and the whole world what people hoped Americans were really like: tough, strong, loyal, just — and never with arrogance but with true humility."

Not Gladys Smith

Well, maybe to have provided us with such a pleasing image of ourselves was worth a congressional medal. But it was not a likeness of real Americans. It was a "hope," an illusion, like America's Sweetheart and John Wayne's image, like Mary Pickford's, was self-deceiving for those who accepted it. An America that did not doubt itself as tough, strong, loyal, just, blundered into Vietnam. If there was not much humility in its illusion, still that was an America as certain of its rectitude as Duke, the American hero, ever was of his, and as ready for a showdown with the villain.

Congress does not award medals to doubters who raise questions. And Americans do not elect presidents who seem to be "one of us," with all our faults and hesitations and fears and uncertainties. We do not want Marion Morrison and Gladys Smith, in the White House or on the screen. The difference is that when we elect our new illusion, it will surely fail us, as Mary Pickford and John Wayne never did.

Their illusions, after all, never had to confront reality.

Road costs

We are writing concerning the cost-sharing policy for roads that the B.C. government has at the present time. We do not question the cost-sharing per se, but we would like to point out that the cost-sharing with municipalities encourages the building of major roads that may be unnecessary, and whose building disturbs the peace and quiet of residential neighborhoods. At the same time these roads take valuable land out of production that could be used for residential housing or other uses. Thus they narrow the potential tax base which could increase municipal revenue. In addition, operational costs for roads increase and residential assessments along these roads may be downgraded. You have probably noticed that most of the municipality planning is done through roads, sewers and water pipes.

We are in a period of time when the government is bringing forth programs of energy conservation. The car happens to be one of the heaviest users of oil products we have. It is a great convenience and we have built our society around it. But, consider the social costs of the auto — noise pollution, a stress and tension producer, thousands killed in car accidents every year, tens of thousands hospitalized or maimed for life at a cost of millions for health care. Building unnecessary roads that continue to promote a proliferate use of the car is counter productive to energy conservation and society generally.

We would also like to point out that where there is cost-sharing for roads with municipalities, there appears to be no cost-sharing for walking, hiking and jogging trails for people. Neither does there appear to be cost-sharing for bicycles or bridle path development.

In this, the Year of the Child, we suggest the B.C. government have a project for this and future generations by providing funds for municipalities for developing nature trails where people can keep fit and enjoy the wonders of our natural environment. — Hal Knight, President, Saanich Greenbelt Association.

Wolf poisoning

Are we once again to be let down by our government? Rafe Mair's about-turn on the policy of no poisoning of wolves has shocked nature lovers and ecologists as well as all those with humanitarian ideas. We had hoped that responsible politicians had begun to see the light in regard to the natural biological balance among wild creatures and that they would not be unduly influenced by stock breeders and other commercial interests.

As in the case of cruel leghold trapping there can be no excuse for the use of poison for predator control with the resultant suffering not only for the wolves but also for many other species of animals and birds. When poison gets into the food chain, there is no telling how much harm it will do to wild life of all kinds.

Anyone who has read recent books on the nature of wolves, such as Of Wolves and Man and The World of the Wolf, written by level-headed biologists, will have acquired respect for those intelligent animals. The stockmen who are demanding the extermination of wolves by poison are motivated by purely monetary considerations and not by any concern for animals wild or domestic. Let them defend their stock by legitimate methods without inflicting untold suffering on other animals whether predators or not.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Mair and the cabinet members will listen to the voices of reason and humanity, in regard to the use of poison, which has proved ineffectual and deleterious in the past. — R. H. Mann, 1577 Gregory Place.

Christian Science dying or another false obit?

By TOM HARPUR
Toronto Star

Oddly enough, just when spiritual or divine healing is making a major comeback in mainline churches, Christian Science, which has made it a cornerstone of faith for a century, has reportedly fallen on hard times.

Indeed, as Christian Science celebrates its centenary this year, there are those who wonder darkly whether it will be around for a 200th anniversary at all.

According to a recent article in the Wall Street Journal, membership is dwindling; the well-known news tabloid, the Christian Science Monitor, is losing circulation and continued to lose money. The Monitor has a current circulation of 194,000. In 1971, the figure was 239,000. Some former members are charging the Boston head office of the denomination with gross mismanagement and a cover-up of financial abuses.

No way to check

North American membership is said to have dropped from roughly 300,000 during the Second World War to well under 200,000 today. But there is no way of checking for sure.

Donald Fulton, head of public relations for the church in Ontario, refused to tell The Star the number of Christian Scientists in Canada, citing founder Mary Baker Eddy's dictum against "numbering the saints."

Asked about reports of numerical decline, he said:

"In all honesty, we have gone through a lack of growth period just like all the other churches. But we have been most heartened lately by requests from two Ontario centres, Newmarket and Smiths Falls, for Church of Christ Scientist facilities."

Robert Peel, the denomination's historian in Boston, describes the situation as a "chance for a second wind," a temporary pause.

The Wall Street Journal's article was headed: A Church in Crisis, Christian Science Sect Has Hope and Charity but Faith is Declining. The Monitor, in an editorial reply, scoffed at the story and said:

"We've been used to premature obsequies (funeral notices) at least since the New York World headlined Mary Baker Eddy as 'dying' — and that was in 1906, two years before she founded the Christian Science Monitor."

In Toronto, the church operates six reading rooms for prayer, study, and the sale of tapes and periodicals. Several visits to the two downtown rooms . . . found them islands of emptiness in the midst of urban business and bustle. You could have fired a cannon through them without fear of hitting anyone.

The Star attended a Wednesday night service at the imposing First Church of Christ Scientist on St. George St. and found about 60 people in the vast auditorium. The ratio of women to men was roughly four to one. The great majority were elderly.

The service began with hymns, lengthy readings from the Bible, corresponding passages from Mrs. Eddy's 732-page volume of church doctrine, Science and Health, and prayer. The balance was devoted to impromptu testimonies of healing and general remarks from "the floor."

The late Marilyn Monroe was raised by two "zealous Christian Science aunts," says British film critic Alexander Walker, and Elizabeth Taylor's parents were both strong Christian Scientists.

One young woman testified that her child had suffered extensively from bowel stoppage until she herself was able to stem her fears and get rid of the false picture of her child as constipated from her mind. She was particularly grateful, she said, because her husband, who originally doubted that a "miracle" of healing had taken place when the child recovered, had now come to faith.

Mary Baker Eddy, who lived from 1821 to 1910, was a native of New Hampshire with a Calvinistic background. She was subject to numerous ailments during the first half of her life until she was introduced to spiritual healing through a mesmerist or hypnotist named P. P. Quimby recommended to her by her second husband.

After Quimby's death in 1866, she began to develop her own principle of spiritual healing based on the principle that mind — grounded in Divine Mind — is the only reality and that matter is illusory. Pain, sin and evil have no reality in themselves but are the products of wrong thinking, she held.

Health, therefore, was to be restored not by medical science but by the spiritual "science" of right thinking taking the place of the patient's illusions.

From this point of view, she studied the Bible afresh and came "by revelation" to the view that this, indeed, was the way in which Christ healed the sick.

Her book, Science and Health, expounded these principles. It was published in 1875 and became an instant success, going through edition after edition.

After her third marriage, in 1877, to an experienced businessman named Eddy, her system of belief flourished.

Today there are about 3,000 branch churches in over 50 countries. In Toronto, there are five churches and Sharon House, a five-bed rest home where healing is done through prayer alone.

Given the high percentage of disease which doctors now attribute to mental or emotional problems and the fact that mainline churches are once again convinced that healing through prayer has its rightful place in ministry to the whole person, a good deal of what Mrs. Eddy said has been vindicated.

However, few outside her church accept the position that pain and suffering are in any way illusory or unreal.

The mainline churches, in recovering spiritual healing techniques, insist that those in no way are meant to take the place of, or to view with, the best in modern medicine.

Christian Science does allow members to go to the doctors for fractured bones or for the birth of a child. In other cases, seeking medical help is frowned upon rather than banned categorically.

Christian Science practitioners, with special training in the healing ministry, can be called on in times of illness. They set their own fees (from $5 to $12 a visit) and their receipts can be claimed for income tax purposes.

Risk of scandal

In the main, the church has managed to steer clear of the obvious risk of scandal associated with this kind of stance in today's society, but just over a year ago a coroner's jury censured Sharon House.

In June of 1977, Dorothy Burcome, 83, fell down the stone steps of the First Church of Christ Scientist on St. George St. She was admitted to Sharon House and treated by prayer. Two days later she died of what doctors later said was a skull fracture and brain hemorrhage.

At the October inquest, neurosurgeon Dr. Michael Schwartz told the corner and jury that science could have done more for her than prayer and meditation. The jury recommended that homes such as Sharon House be government-regulated. Those who are admitted to such homes should be required to see a doctor first for proper diagnosis, it said.

Mess is a mess is a mess

If there had to be a rescue operation, Robert Stanfield was the ideal choice for the job.

The purpose of his appointment, ostensibly to study Canada's relations with the countries of the Middle East, was clearly to lend dignity to the Clark government's ignominious retreat from its ill-considered promise to move the Canadian embassy to Jerusalem. Mr. Stanfield had the dignity — nobody alive in Canada has more — to lend. Whether dignity can be lent or borrowed in this way is another question.

Mr. Stanfield has a sense of humor, too. He will need that to understand the essential nature of his mandate. He also has the qualities of character and understanding to take a mandate that arises from a ridiculous situation and transform it into a useful undertaking.

So Prime Minister Joe Clark was able to leave for the Tokyo economic summit, which will turn heavily on energy and thus on dealings between the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countires and the West, assured that the mess has been swept under a rug of impeccable taste and quality.

But the excellence of the rug does not alter the nature of the mess.

The Clark government, while it was still campaigning to become the government, made a promise that had not been thought through. Such thought that had gone into it was obviously inadequate and ill-informed. For Mr. Clark, in his statements, appeared to assume that once a peace treaty had been signed between Israel and Egypt there were no further problems outstanding in the Middle East that could be complicated by such an ill-timed gesture.

Mr. Clark also chose, after his election victory, to over-ride conspicuously the misgivings of External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald by singling out this promise as a demonstration of his government's intent to show the civil service who was boss.

It has instead become a demonstration of his government's readiness to submit to pressure and intimidation. The intimidation was severe. The pressure was real. It was backed up by real power, capable of doing deep hurt to that most sensitive of Canadian nerve centres, the pocket.

None of this should have been unforeseen. The readiness of the Arab states to apply pressure, the leverage at their command, and the sensitivity of the Canadian pocket, were all well known.

And now Mr. Stanfield is to look into the nature of relations between Canada and the countries of the Middle East. He will not be surprised, nor should we be, when he finds that Canada is sometimes viewed by the nations of the Middle East, Israeli and Arab alike, with noticeable contempt.

Whiffs of pig from Toronto pens

By ADELE FREEDMAN

In a curious reversal of current social trends, Toronto authors are finding their way back to the country like Canada geese migrating northward when the weather turns.

Margaret Laurence, our most famous novelist, holes out in Lakefield. Margaret Atwood, our next most famous novelist, plays the shepherdess outside Alliston. Alice Munro, who has just won the Governor General's Award, has made her nest in Clinton. Timothy Findley, last year's Governor General winner, lives in a farm in a secret location outside Toronto. Matt Cohen writes silly novels about people he doesn't know much about from headquarters outside Kingston.

This is not to say that our writers can't reflect what is going on in our lives. It's just that they don't. The majority of Canadian women live in cities, not Manawaka. The majority of Canadian women are trying to pave a way through urban chaos; we're not frustrated academics searching for bearfriends.

When I read McClelland and Stewart's $50,000 prize-winning first novel, Aritha van Herk's Judith — Pig, son of Bear, I was amazed. Any intelligent woman who can write rhapsodicaly of a heroine who took a deep whiff of pig and "opened herself for them, stretched herself wide and unending, her arms out, her head tall, her legs long," — and then uttered those immortal words every pig wants to hear: "Pigs, you win" — deserves to spend the rest of her life in a barn with the windows permanently sealed.

Where are we to look for a reflection of the place and times we live in — that takes up where Hugh Garner's Cabbagetown left off? . . . in Toronto, the only slice of life I can think of is Barry Callaghan's Hogg Poems — which are not another treatise on swine but the most imaginative description of that mysterious underground network all of us use — the subway — one could hope to find. And of course there's Milton Acorn — who wanders in and around Toronto like a one-man milieu. But Callaghan and Acorn are in the position of righteous men on whose behalf an entire community can't be saved.

I've been told that once upon a time, a milieu did exist. Back in the nirvanic '60s, Dennis Lee and the inhabitants of the House of Anansi read their poetry at the Bohemian Embassy. Civil Elegies and The Circle Game spoke to us. Now an attempt has been made to re-create the Embassy at Harbourfront, but it's a case of artificial insemination. If you are in the mind to attend a Simpson's literary lunch in the hope of sighting a writer, you'll be disappointed. With the exception of the speaker, the audience is entirely made up of publishing-house flacks in pantyhose and Fruit of the Loom, smiling broadly.

Everyone, in short, is playing it safe.

PetroCan contacts need oiling

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn should make it clear he wants Petro-Canada, the country's national oil company, to complete long-term oil contract negotiations with Mexico and Venezuela started under the previous government.

Canada's need for oil imports will continue throughout the next decade and with the precariousness of supplies that is likely to exist through much of the 1980s it is vital that arrangements be made to ensure at least part of those future supplies have been secured through direct arrangements with the suppliers.

Bill Hopper, chairman of Petro-Canada, has announced that the oil firm's negotiations with its national oil company counterparts in Mexico and Venezuela have been ended until the new Clark government decides what it wants to do . . . .

Joe Clark said he preferred to see the multi-national oil companies make arrangements for Canada's oil import needs.

He also attacked the Mexican oil deal saying the money that would be spent to import Mexican oil should be used to develop new oil supplies in Canada. What Clark ignored was that Canada has to import oil through the 1980s, even with a crash program to develop new Canadian oil supplies, because it will be impossible to become self-sufficient before sometime in the 1990s. Sufficient new supplies and new tar sands plants will take that long to develop.

Recent developments in the Organization for Petroleum Exporting Countries should underline the need for Canada to do everything it can to arrange long-term energy supplies and not leave itself dependent on the allocation decisions of the international oil companies for future oil imports.

Meanwhile, neighboring Saudi Arabia has made it clear it can no longer be counted on to raise production to meet rising world oil needs. Instead of producing an expected 16 million barrels a day of oil by the mid-1980s, compared to 8.5 million barrels a day now, recent assessments suggest its output may rise to little more than 10 million barrels a day by then.

It would be a tragedy if the ideological opposition of the Conservatives to a public oil company were to result in Canadians in Eastern Canada, Quebec and parts of Ontario freezing in the dark a few years from now.

Vic General name stays, board rules

Victoria General Hospital board voted 7-2 Thursday to retain the name for the new hospital on Helmcken Road.

The decision came after months of deliberation on what to call the hospital once it moves from Fairfield Road to Helmcken Road in View Royal. The new building, now under construction, is due to open some time in 1982.

Hospital trustee Dr. Eugene Kaellis along with Syd Lnghelt voted against the name choice. Kaellis said the present hospital would probably continue as a health care facility and retaining the same name for the new facility would confuse the public.

Trustee Carol Pickup, however, said the name should be retained when the hospital moves because of the reputation for care it had acquired.

Hospital administrator Jim Fair told the board that a public poll on a name for the new facility produced 83 responses with 66 per cent favoring Victoria General Hospital.

Pill plan to counter radiation

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government is considering a plan to give people living near nuclear power plants pills that would reduce the effect of exposure to radiation, a spokesman says.

Max Fitch, chief of Ontario's radiation emergency control group and a director of the labor ministry, said Wednesday the potassium iodide pills would be given to people living within five kilometres of the four nuclear power plants of Ontario Hydro.

The pills can reduce the accumulation of radiation, which concentrates in the thyroid gland.

Fitch said people would be warned not to take the pills unless told to do so during a leak of radiation.

He said the government is considering dispensing the pills shortly.

Views differ on overseer

Regional director of hospital planning Murray Halkett said today it would be "ludicrous" not to have an additional overseer on the construction site of the new Victoria General Hospital on Helmcken Road.

He was responding to statements by VGH chairman Alan Patterson at Thursday's board meeting.

Patterson, a member of the four-man project building committee which is technically the owner of the building project until it is formally turned over to the board, said he considered the appointment of an additional overseer at a salary of more than $40,000 a year, plus 12 per cent fringe benefits, was "really superflous".

Patterson said it was unclear who was going to pick up the tab.

Halkett said the person who has been selected for the job would act as a consultant on a contract basis. The costs would be absorbed in the same manner as others connected with the project, 60 per cent being paid for by the provincial government and the remainder by the Capital Regional District.

He said at least three people should be on the site to supervise a building project involving $47 million. At present there is only a field engineer.

He said it is obvious that Patterson did not agree with the other committee members that such a position is essential.

Second no vote by CUPE

The second of five locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees bargaining as a unit for new contracts has voted strongly against acceptance of a two-year offer from the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association.

Local 947 members voted 102 to 11 Wednesday night to reject the offer which provides for a 7.25-per-cent wage increase in each of the two years.

On Tuesday night, Victoria city outside workers rejected the package by a vote of 162 to 4.

Three other locals covering Esquimalt, Saanich and outside school board employees have yet to vote.

2 ferry incidents

Considering the millions of miles the 25 ships of the B.C. Ferry fleet sail every year, the odd fender-bender isn't unexpected.

There were only two reported incidents all of last year, according to the corporation annual report filed in the legislature this week.

The less serious of the two gives full particulars, while the other report is devastatingly succinct.

"The Snug Cove berth was damaged when the M.V. Howe Sound Queen made a hard landing striking wingwalls heavily, and though collapsing the wingwalls, damage was sustained to the towers," says the first report.

"The berth and dock structure required complete renewal," the brief report states.

Camosun budget approved

Camosun College board approved an $11 million 1979-80 operating budget Thursday, the first not directly funded by local property owners.

Under the new Colleges and Provincial Institutes Act the budget, a 10.8 per cent increase over 1978, is paid for completely by the provincial government.

Last year Greater Victoria School District taxpayers contributed $1.3 million toward Camosun's operating expenses.

College board chairman Janet Baird said she had reservations about the budget formula because it is so complicated it makes comparisions with last year's budget impossible.

She said the college had to hire additional staff to get the budget in by the education ministry's deadline.

Before the judge

Two members of the Tsartlip band at Brentwood Bay were found guilty in provincial court Thursday of two charges laid under the B.C. Wildlife Act involving the hunting and possession of a deer out of season.

Judge Blake Allan said there ought to be a deterrent but in view of the circumstances of the case he would grant conditional discharges with six months probation to Anderson Jack, 55, and George Charlie, 51.

"I don't want it to be taken as open season on deer," he said of his sentencing.

An appeal will be immediately launched, their defence counsel said later.

The judge, who had reserved decision at the conclusion of the trial on June 1, said that while there was no doubt of the men's sincerity the fact that they had killed the deer for a traditional religious ceremony was not a defence.

The court was told the men had — with some fear of the law — killed the deer for Elizabeth Jack, the wife of one and the sister of the other, whose mind was troubled by the visit of the spirit of her great grandfather and that the burning of deer meat was necessary to appease that spirit.

The judge said he was satisfied by the evidence that the burning of food was a religious ceremony passed down from generation to generation through the band's elders.

He said meat for religious purposes could have been obtained either through storage from the hunting season or by special permits.

He noted there was no applicable section of the act that related to the situation which brought the two before the court, nor is there a provincial statute which ensures the freedom of religion. However, Allan said, the purpose of the act could not be construed as purposefully interfering with their freedom of religion.

He noted the men testified they had killed the deer May 26, 1978, on Pender Island. Once the act is proven, a finding of guilt must follow, he said.

Prosecutor Nicholas Lang and defence counsel Louise Mandel said the case might be an appropriate one for a discharge.

Mandel said that while there had been a violation of the act there was no criminal intent. Her clients, as the judge noted, were law-abiding men. She said both had undergone hardship because of the case, including those associated with making public the details of their religious ceremonies.

A 19-year-old, who spent five months in jail awaiting disposition of a number of charges from several jurisdictions, was sent back for six more months.

Judge Harold Alder, in sentencing Darren Brown of Shawnigan Lake and Mackenzie, recommended the time be spent at a forestry camp.

Brown was first brought before the court earlier in the year on a charge of possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking. The charge was laid after a Jan. 29 police investigation at a Pembroke Street apartment. The court was told Brown had in his possession marijuana with the approximate street value of $1,000.

Brown was scheduled to go to trial on the drug matter but subsequently changed his plea to guilty. The court was told that sentencing on that and the other matters was delayed because of the slow arrival of particulars of the additional charges from other jurisdictions.

Brown was sentenced to one month after he pleaded guilty to a July 8, 1978, charge of the theft of a television aerial at Mackenzie. He was given two one-month sentences to be served concurrently after entering guilty pleas for car theft and possession of a restricted weapon laid Aug. 9, 1978, at Leduc, Alberta.

Alder sentenced him to one month for a break-in and theft of liquor, Dec. 9, 1978, at the Shawnigan Lake Country Club, and three months for the drug charge earlier this year.

Judge Fred Green this week committed two men to stand trial in county court on a charge of arson.

Anthony John Mettes, 21, of 1039 View, and Paul Leonard Joseph Taylor, 25, of Langley, were charged in connection with an October fire at a Broad Street disco.

3 jailed in 'mass, animal attack'

Three young men were jailed Thursday in what a county court judge called a "mass, animal attack" on a Victorian strolling through Beacon Hill Park April 14.

Judge E.J.C. Stewart sentenced Timothy Dwaine Roberge, 19, to one year, and Jeffrey Florente Desmoulin, 18, and James Harvey Ward, 20, to nine months each after they pleaded guilty June 12 to robbery with violence.

The three were arrested after Joseph A. Longpre, 57, was attacked by a group of young people as he walked near Dallas Road about 11 p.m. The victim was admitted to hospital with a broken cheekbone, temporary loss of vision in one eye, cracked ribs and bruises and still suffers double vision at times, court was told.

Longpre told police he noticed about five young men walking toward him and in view of the time and location he feared a mugging. He tossed his wallet into the bush and when the group came up to him he was attacked.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said Longpre, described as mild-mannered, was kicked, punched and beaten with a stick. His assailants asked where his money was and Longpre said he didn't have any, so he was beaten some more.

They took off his shoes and socks in search of money, stole his wristwatch and threw Longpre's keys away. Approaching headlights of a car scared them off, Birkett said.

Longpre found his socks, put them on and walked to Victoria General Hospital where surgery was performed. For three weeks he was unable to use his right eye.

Coincidentally, patrolling police checked Roberge and his companions at Fairfield and Cook shortly after the robbery, but at that time they were unaware of the crime.

Next day a stroller found the wristwatch where it had been ditched in a planter near the same intersection, and on the following day the trio was arrested.

Birkett said Roberge had been on probation when the offence was committed, having been convicted in February on two counts of breaking, entering and theft.

The other two, recently arrived from Ontario, had clear records.

Counsel William McElmoyle, for Roberge, said the group had been drinking, and that it included several persons who took a leading role in the offence which led from a discussion about going to the park.

Ted Hanman, speaking for Ward and Desmoulin, said at least eight persons including juveniles and a girl had been involved originally, and as far as he knew the ringleaders had not been charged in adult or juvenile courts.

Each of the three accused had expressed remorse for what they had done and each had been in custody 2½ months, court was told. The accused should know now this kind of behavior is "not only intolerable but inexcusable," Hanman said.

Birkett said it was suggested at a drinking party that they go to a place in the park known to be frequented by homosexuals, "to roll a fag."

One of the outstanding factors in the case, he said "is the brutality displayed; by the grace of God, he was not killed, or suffered the loss of an eye."

The public interest demanded jail for such "cowardly and brutal" behavior, such "wolfpack hooliganism," the prosecutor said.

Stewart said had there been any record of previous violence it would have meant penitentiary terms for all three. But jail was required for rehabilitation, he said.

"There can be no excuse for this type of mass, animal attack," the judge said.

Five-day break given Ross murder trial jury

The jury was excused for five days Thursday in the second week of the murder trial in B.C. Supreme Court of Tommy Ross Jr. of Los Angeles, charged with a Mother's Day strangling in 1978.

First degree murder is alleged in the death of 26-year-old mother of two Janice Forbes in her apartment at 1017 Queens on May 14.

After 8½ days the trial was to continue today in the absence of the jury while matters of law are decided by Mr. Justice Alan Macfarlane. He expected all of next week and the following week may be required to conclude the trial.

There will be no sitting of the court Monday, the July 1 holiday.

The case was adjourned Thursday after jurors heard the evidence of Sgt. Doug Richardson of Victoria city police. He said he was present in the woman's apartment when her young children, who discovered the body, were taken back later to tell investigators whether there were things missing or out of place in the rooms.

That was when a green glass teapot normally kept in the diningroom was noticed by the children to be missing from its usual place and spotted later on top of a dresser. Identification analysis disclosed a thumbprint of the accused.

Earlier, 10-year-old Kelly Forbes told of seeing a black man in the apartment building the day of the murder, and of later identifying a photograph she said was the same man. She pointed to the accused as that man.

Six youths arrested at graduation parties

With graduation week in full swing police in Colwood and Saanich made it to a lot of parties Thursday night — but they weren't exactly welcome guests.

In Saanich six youths were arrested at house parties. Two were charged with causing a disturbance and two with resisting arrest.

In Colwood the RCMP called in extra men from Sooke and got to the parties before the trouble started — making 40 liquor seizures throughout the evening.

Colwood police decided to be quick off the mark Thursday after having trouble breaking up a beach party Wednesday night at Witty's Lagoon.

Police said although grad parties have been causing considerable trouble in Colwood, the Witty's incident stemmed from an ordinary beach party, not a grad get-together.

Today's Markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market rose moderately in active mid-afternoon trading today.

Trading was halted at the opening in shares of Canadian Superior Oil Ltd. for dissemination of news that its majority shareholder, Superior Oil Co., has made an offer to buy all remaining outstanding shares. The stock last traded at $143.

Trading in shares of Maplex Management and Holdings Ltd. was halted at the opening at the company's request pending an announcement. The stock last traded at $11½.

Trading resumed at the opening in shares of Dundee Palliser Resources Inc., following a halt Thursday. The company said it will close its Athabasca foundry division in Saskatoon. The stock fell one cent to 49 cents by 2 p.m.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly on an unconfirmed report that Libya had threatened to cut off its oil exports.

Col. Moammar Khadafy of Libya was quoted by a Paris-based Arabic weekly publication as having said last Monday that he plans to shut off oil exports for at least two years.

Libya, one of the most militant members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, accounts for about 10 per cent of the oil imported by the United States.

There was no confirmation of the story, however, and several oil companies which deal with Libya said they had no indication that it was true.

Nevertheless, Amerada Hess was down 1⅜ to $44½; Continental Oil dropped ¼ to $38¾, and Occidental Petroleum was off ¼ to $23¾.

London

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 473.4, up 4.2.

Industrials and golds declined while banks were mixed.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices regained some strength in moderate afternoon trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange and nudged the 85-stock composite index up 0.15 to 274.57.

Volume at 3 p.m. EDT was 392,340 shares traded, compared with 485,827 shares traded up to the same time Thursday.

Political ad sales to be regulated

QUEBEC (CP) — The sale of advertising space in publications produced by political parties in the province is to be regulated under the terms of a bill tabled in the Quebec national assembly.

The bill, presented by Robert Burns, minister for parliamentary reform, amends the government's 1977 law on party financing which has been criticized by the opposition for not including a section covering such advertising.

Stricter raft safety urged

BOSTON BAR (CP) — An five-man inquest jury said today the federal government should draft stricter regulations for life jackets and for motors on rafts using B.C. rivers.

The jury's recommendations came early this morning after deliberations which started just before midnight.

The inquest in this Fraser Canyon community followed the deaths of 11 persons aboard a nine-metre raft that overturned in the Fraser River north of Hell's Gate May 6. The raft was operated by Cascade River Holidays.

Killed were Duncan Harvey McLaren of Vancouver, Ferguson Michael Delaney of Toronto, both 35, and Michael Thomas Barry of Burnaby.

The jury told coroner Peter Kennedy that even though all aboard wore lifejackets approved by the ministry of transport, the deaths could have been avoided if the lifejackets had a greater buoyancy.

Dr. John Heyward of the University of Victoria told the inquest that people are more susceptible to drowning in cold water. The jury said the federal government should consult Heyward's study on the subject when it drafts new regulations for lifejackets.

The jury also said all rafts should be rated for horsepower, carrying capacity and general safety.

The inquest was told earlier that the Canadian Armed Forces uses four 18-horsepower engines on similar rafts. The raft which overturned had one 20-horsepower engine.

Phillip Reambault, the raft's operator, told the inquest he safely negotiated the rapids around Scuzzy Rock once, but ran into trouble on a second pass. Strong currents pushed the raft onto the rock, a pontoon was punctured and the raft overturned.

Eight managed to reach shore safely.

Peace cattle clean

OTTAWA (CP) — British Columbia and the Peace River area of Alberta are officially free of brucellosis, a disease which causes abortion in cows, Agriculture Minister John Wise said Thursday.

Those areas join the four Atlantic provinces in the brucellosis-free category. The Prairies and Quebec are listed as low incidence while Ontario remains under strict controls over cattle movement, part of the federal campaign to eradicate the disease.

1979 fruit crop looking good

KELOWNA (CP) — The fruit crop outlook in British Columbia is bright this year, despite a cold winter which will decrease peach and pear yields.

John Thompson of B.C. Tree Fruits Ltd., said Thursday there will be increased yields of cherries, apricots, prunes and apples.

Thompson said cash value of fruit handled by the grower-owned company was almost $70 million in 1978, while Sun-Rype Products Ltd. handled more than $29 million in processed fruit.

He said that although the market appears to be good, it is too early to predict its total value but he expects value of processed fruit to increase by about $4 million.

He said the cherry crop, on which harvesting began last week, will increase by about 1.2 million pounds to 13.2 million pounds.

Salmon fishermen unite to talk prices

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two groups which represent the majority of fishermen and shoreworkers in British Columbia have cast their lots together in negotiations with the Fisheries Association of B.C. for negotiations on 1979 salmon price agreements.

Spokesmen for the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union (UFAWU) and the Native Brotherhood of B.C. said joint negotiations will put added pressure on the industry to settle.

The two groups bargained jointly until 1975 and have maintained a close working relationship since then. Members of the brotherhood respected the UFAW's tie-up in support of striking union tendermen last summer.

The UFAWU represents almost 7,000 people including fishermen who catch the fish, tendermen who haul them to shore and shoreworkers who process them.

The annual bartering for minimum prices on different types of salmon began here May 17. The fishermens' demands are based on the prices which were actually paid in 1978 rather than the prices that were negotiated.

For example, the UFAWU is asking $2.70 a pound for sockeye. The negotiated price last year was 88 cents a pound but union officials say fishermen were actually paid $1.15.

They want $3 a pound for spring salmon over five pounds, up from the $1.10 negotiated last year and the $1.91 that was paid. Other demands a pound include: $1.50 for pink, up from 36 cents negotiated and 38 cents paid; $2.30 for coho, up from 62 cents negotiated and $1.52 paid; and $2.57 for chum, up from 48 cents negotiated and 96 cents paid.

The UFAWU also wants increased payments to its welfare fund, more medical benefits and a dental plan.

In a news release, the UFAWU says its demands are justified by continued inflation in the cost of fuel and gear and by continued record profits of the processing companies.

Tendermen and shoreworkers have also been involved in negotiations for the past few months.

Campagnolo to get job as TV talk host

VANCOUVER (CP) — Old politicians never die — they turn into media stars.

Like a host of other defeated politicians before her, former cabinet minister Iona Campagnolo has found a job that will keep her in the public eye.

CAMPAGNOLO
. . . one of a kind

Mrs. Campagnolo, former Liberal MP for Skeena and minister for fitness and sports under Pierre Trudeau's government, will act as host of a new CBC British Columbia program that will start in early October.

Producer Merv Campone said the prime-time show — to be called One of A Kind — will feature interviews with people from various walks of life. All programs will be shot on location, he said.

Before her election to Parliament in 1974, Mrs. Campagnolo worked for Skeena Broadcasting Ltd. in Prince Rupert and was named B.C.'s broadcasting citizen of the year in 1974.

The CBC news release said Mrs. Campagnolo will make Vancouver her home base but will maintain her permanent residence in Prince Rupert.

Mrs. Campagnolo was narrowly defeated by Jim Fulton of the New Democratic Party in the May 22 federal election.

That's really a hot car for police to handle

SALMON ARM (CP) — RCMP had a hot car on their hands Wednesday night.

Someone in this southern Interior community poured gasoline over the right front end of a police cruiser parking outside the detachment office and set it ablaze. Police raced out of the office and doused the flames which caused an estimated $550 damage.

Smelter 'safe'

KITIMAT (CP) — The Aluminum Co. of Canada said Thursday a report on the environmental effects of its aluminum smelter shows that emissions pose no threat to the health of residents of this north coast community.

Alcan said in a news release a study committee agreed that a future reduction in fluoride emissions should be recommended, as stated in an earlier report which cited a reduction in growth rate of trees near the smelter.

The company said the proposed reduction, now being recommended to the provincial pollution control board for inclusion in Alcan's pollution control permit, falls within commitments already made by the company.

Kudos for credit

PENTICTON (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett praised the dynamic growth of the B.C. credit union movement, noting Thursday that the 167 credit union branches in the province now contain assets of more than $4 billion.

Speaking to 250 delegates at the annual convention of the B.C. Central Credit Union, the premier also said he is encouraged by the movement's increasing role in underwriting small businesses.

Bennett thanked delegates for the credit unions' role in the recently-completed program to distribute five free shares in the B.C. Resources Investment Corp. to every qualified resident of the province.

Ten per cent of the shares were distributed through credit unions, he noted.

Drug charges

VERNON (CP) — Four men were arrested on drug charges Thursday and warrants were issued for five others as a result of an RCMP undercover investigation in this Okanagan city.

More than 40 people have been charged with various drug-related offences so far this month.

Arrested Thursday were Raymond Clare Fralick, William Wayne Lysak, James Arnold McIntosh and Daniel Martin, all of Vernon. All were charged with trafficking in a narcotic.

RCMP said the undercover operation involved the purchase of cocaine, LSD, MDA and marijuana from nine Vernon and area residents.

Supreme Court ups Victoria woman's award

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada has awarded a divorced Victoria woman entitlement to one-third of the value of the home she shared with her former husband.

But the nine-member court was split on the decision, with a minority of four judges saying that Hazel Harper should be granted half the value of the house as she requested.

The Supreme Court ruling released Thursday overturned the British Columbia Court of Appeal which said the woman was not entitled to any share of the property because legal title to the home belonged to the federal government, not to her former husband, under the Veterans' Land Act.

In an earlier ruling, the Supreme Court of British Columbia had said Mrs. Harper was entitled to ¼ of the home which the couple purchased jointly in 1962 with money borrowed from the Port Alberni Credit Union.

Chief Justice Bora Laskin, in the majority decision, said the husband had misled the B.C. appeal court by not admitting that legal title to the home had n fact been transferred to him from the government director, Veterans' Land Act, in 1974.

The chief justice said that by not admitting the transfer, the husband had misled the courts to take advantage of his wife, something "no court can condone."

Provincial matrimonial property laws do not apply to a home an individual is buying under the Veterans' Land Act. Title to the home remains with the government until the house is paid for.

This law, considered sexually discriminatory by women's rights advisers in the federal government, is currently being reviewed for change by the justice department. A report on the matter is due in December.

Chief Justice Laskin also said that the Supreme Court judge in British Columbia who originally awarded Mrs. Harper ¼ of the home included irrelevant factors in his decision, such as the fact that the couple made no attempt at reconciliation. They were married in 1949 were separated in 1968 and were divorced in 1973.

The chief justice also said the fact that the husband had remarried and "started to build a new life for himself" in the home and was contributing to the maintenance of their seven children should not have swayed the lower court.

The dissenting judges, in a decision written by Mr. Justice Willard Estey, said Mrs. Harper should get half the property because "the general rule of 50-50" has become standard in Canada unless there are unusual circumstances.

Mr. Justice Estey said that in this, as in many other matrimonial property cases, there is no way to calculate exactly how much each spouse contributed to the marriage.

Port Angeles oil port meet slated for July

An information meeting on an oil port proposed for Port Angeles and tanker traffic in the Strait of Juan de Fuca will be held July 13 in the Capital Regional District's board room at 524 Yates.

Federal and provincial politicians and department representatives have been invited to attend the meeting which starts at 9 a.m.

Gary Smith of Northern Tier Pipeline Co., Trevor Durrand of Trans Mountain Pipeline Co. and Michael Doherty, co-ordinator of the Clallam Oil Port Task Force, will make presentations.

H.O. Buchanan of Vancouver, regional director for the Canadian Coast Guard, will speak on traffic management in the strait and R. Sherwood of the federal Environment Protection Service will give an evaluatuon of the potential impact on the enviroment.

A representative of the provincial Environment and Land Use Committee Secretariat will also attend.

G.E. Hutchinson, regional director of the Provincial Emergency Measures Program will speak on capability to cope with oil spills.

The U.S. government has to decide by December where the proposed oil port is to be located and the Bureau of Land Management has to file its report by Aug. 24.

"There is a lack of understanding here as to the nature and risks of the Juan de Fuca oil port proposals," said regional board head Murray Glazier.

"At the same time, as the deadline for decision by the Americans draws near, concerns are mounting here as to the effects it might have on our community."

Color parade

A new Queen's Color will be paraded in a special ceremony July 7 in Beacon Hill Park.

Lieutenant-Governor Henry Bell-Irving will be the reviewing officer.

The ceremony, which starts at 2 p.m., will be held on the playing field on the west side of the park adjacent to Douglas Street.

A total of 168 members of Maritime Command Pacific were part of a 700-strong contingent that were on parade Wednesday when the Queen Mother presented the new Queen's Color. The Esquimalt-based unit, made up from the Canadian Forces Fleet School, CFB Esquimalt and Esquimalt-based ships, provided a royal guard for the new color, a 34-member Naden band and the color party.

The Queen's Color is paraded only on shore for special ceremonial occasions involving royalty or the sovereign's representatives.

Lie detector curb sought by Leggatt

Coquitlam-Moody NDP MLA Stu Leggatt plans to introduce a private members' bill that would end the commercial use of lie detectors in B.C.

Leggatt said the danger of lie detectors in private hands is that they are not voluntary, as is their use in criminal matters.

They are growing more popular as more companies bring them on the market at cheaper prices.

"It's just one more edge into the totalitarian state that we don't want to see," he said.

Banks and other commercial institutions use lie detectors to screen employees and to check if any have been involved in theft, he said.

"When it is used involuntarily, it is a very serious violation of an individual's privacy — a right we should have in a democratic society," Leggatt said.

Lie detectors aren't reliable enough for a person's job to hang on it, he said, and a person who loses his job because of a faulty test has a permanent black mark against him and is looked down on by his colleagues.

Even being asked to take one is onerous, Leggatt added.

Allowing someone accused by police of criminal activity to ask for a lie detector test is as far as they should be allowed to be used, he suggested.

$4B budget half spent

The provincial legislature has only begun to approve this year's $4.56 billion in spending estimates although close to half of it is already spent.

The house Thursday interrupted regular business to pass an emergency interim supply bill, authorizing a further spending of $1.2 billion to carry the province through the next three months of the fiscal year.

An earlier interim supply bill was passed in late March to cover the first three months of the fiscal year which starts April 1.

Lieut.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving was called to the legislature just after noon Thursday to give royal assent to the new bill — so spending can continue after July 1.

Only the spending estimates of the premier's office, the finance ministry and the agriculture ministry have been approved so far by the house.

Sixteen other ministries' estimates are still to be debated.

Bell-Irving also gave royal assent to 11 other bills that had received third reading in the house, including the amendment bill to the B.C. Resources Investment Act.

The other bills were mostly the finance bills approving the promises made in the throne speech — sales tax reduction, reduced assessments on farm property for school taxes, spending for Victoria and Vancouver's trade centres and other tax reduction legislation.

Protest plague 'hurts farmers'

Environmental protesters are creating serious problems for B.C. farmers and ranchers, Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt said Thursday.

Hewitt told the legislature during debate of his budgetary estimates, that protesters are "really causing problems to the farmers in regard to weed control and to our ranchers who have problems with their grazing lands."

Everytime they turn around, he said, environmentalists tell them they can't do something, "yet that same enviromentalist relies on our farmers for food."

Outside the legislature Hewitt said criticism surrounding the use of herbicides is not justified.

"They should look at the ramifications of saying 'No you can't do it.' That may say 'No we can't have any tree fruit crops in this province' and we would have to rely on outside sources because we have had them wiped out with codling moth."

Hewitt said he does not know if zones will solve the problem "but it seems that as we expand our city boundaries, the farmer is the first man to suffer."

He also said that the price of food is not high in Canada nd farmers are getting a reasonable return on their investment.

Hiring incentive boosted by B.C.

The provincial human resources ministry announced Thursday it has added extra incentive to its current program to have the private sector hire people on welfare.

The ministry said employers who provide jobs and training experience will qualify for a 50-per-cent refund on wages for each employee up to $2.50 an hour.

The ministry also said it will set up its own placement service to ensure that any prospective employee is equipped for work and is provided with counselling while employed.

The funding initially will be approved for jobs lasting up to four months, but the period may be extended to an additional eight months if the term of employment and skill training offered promises to lead to long-term employment.

$46.2M from bids

The provincial government collected $46.2 million in bids let recently for oil and gas exploration rights on 117 parcels of land in the northeastern part of the province.

Energy Minister Jim Hewitt said the government made $12.2 million on bids on three parcels totalling almost 24,000 hectares in the natural gas-rich region around Fort Nelson and Fort St. John. Pacific Petroleum, Esso Resources Canada and Norcen Energy Resources led the bidding.

Bonus bids on six drilling reservations covering more than 20,000 hectares went for $17.3 million.

Churches protest in vain on heritage designations

In a unanimous vote council added the churches to the city's growing heritage program that has so far focused only on residential and commercial structures.

Numerous church groups have been lobbying against the proposed designation for months, but their efforts failed to win any support from aldermen.

Ald. Bob Wright said that if council backed away from designating churches then it might as well abandon the residential and commercial phases as well.

"I don't think we can have two standards in Victoria," he said.

Wright added that "Victoria is the oldest city in Canada west of Winnipeg and if we let out heritage go by the board it (the city) just becomes another 'Anywhere'."

Ald. Bill McElroy agreed, saying that although there had been a lot of church representatives opposed to the move, there had been no guarantees that the buildings might not be demolished sometime in the future.

Church representatives who addressed council said that church organizations have a long history of preserving their buildings of worship.

"Christian churches have been constructing and maintaining heritage buildings for nearly two thousand years," said one speaker.

He said the city's intervention was neither needed nor wanted.

Robert MacRae, rector of St. John the Divine, 1611 Quadra, said that heritage designation could well turn out to be an infringement on human rights.

He said that if the St. John's congregation wished, at some time in the future, to alter the building to more accurately reflect their belief, council might not approve it.

"The proposed designation of churches as heritage sites is dangerously close to denying us our freedom of religion . . . We do not want our freedom of religion to be violated, infringed upon or denied for the sake of some artificial moment in history when our church is declared heritage."

McElroy, however, criticised MacRae for comparing Victoria's move to impose heritage designation "to countries in the world that torture and kill people for their religious beliefs."

The churches given heritage designation are: First Church of Christ Scientist, 1205 Pandora; Church of Our Lord, 626 Blanshard; First United Church, 1701 Quadra; Metropolitan United Church; 1411 Quadra; St. Saviour's Anglican Church, 310 Henry; St. Andrew's Cathedral and the Bishop's Palace, 740 View; Centennial United Church, 649 Gorge; St. John the Divine, 1611 Quadra; St. Andrew's Presbyterian, 680 Courtenay; James Bay United, 511 Michigan; The Belfry, 1900 Fernwood; Pemberton Memorial Chapel, Jubilee Hospital and Christ Church Cathedral, Memorial Hall, Yarrows Chapel and surrounding lands, 912 Vancouver.

Pilot's family aboard missing aircraft

An air search was launched early today for a light aircraft missing on a flight from Watson Lake, just north of the B.C.-Yukon border, to Whitehorse.

Aboard the plane, which left Watson Lake at 2 p.m. Thursday on the 2½-hour flight, are the pilot, his wife and their two sons, aged nine and 11.

Their identity is being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Two Twin Otters and a Hercules arcraft from CFB Edmonton and a Labrador helicopter and Buffalo fixed-wing aircraft from CFB Comox are involved in the search.

A Canadian armed forces spokesman said the family was believed to be on a flight from Georgia to Alaska and the pilot intended to follow the Alaska highway.

He said the pilot contacted another light plane on Thursday and said he was lost.

He said the missing plane has an electronic locator transmitter and survival equipment aboard.

Jeanette's gone her club lives on

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jeanette MacDonald died Jan. 15, 1965, her last movie was made 30 years ago, but her fan club is burgeoning as strongly as it did during her lifetime.

This week some 300 MacDonald fans held their annual convention in Hollywood to pay homage to the singing star who brought the first operatic voice to movies back in 1929 when she starred with Maurice Chevalier in The Love Parade.

The 1,300-member club, founded by Jeanette herself in 1937, publishes a quarterly magazine and a news letter under the guidance of club president Clara Rhoades who administers the organization from her home in Topeka, Kan.

The club is affiliated with the International Council of Fan Clubs, 50 strong.

While the MacDonald club is not the largest, it ranks among the most active, behind such others as Elvis Presley, Liberace and Judy Garland.

Public relations for the club is in the hands of Paul Brogan, 28, of Hillsboro, N.H., who wasn't born when Jeanette made her last picture, The Sun Comes Up with Lloyd Nolan, Claude Jarman Jr. and Lassie at MGM.

A voluble young man, Brogan, joined the club 16 years ago at Jeanette's invitation after he wrote the star to tell her how much he'd enjoyed seeing Rose Marie on television.

Jeanette costarred in the film with Nelson Eddy, with whom she made eight musical movie hits. They rank as one of the most successful of all film teams.

What, Brogan was asked, is the purpose of a fan club, especially after the star has been dead almost 15 years?

"We're trying to perpetuate her memory, her music and the values she stood for," Brogan said. "She made operetta easily acceptable to the masses. Until she came along audiences had to suffer with 300-pound divas.

"Our purpose is to unite people who appreciate Jeanette's talent. Young people are constantly discovering her movies on TV. Some write to MGM thinking she's still alive. Our members range in age from 8 to 86.

"In her movies with Nelson Eddy she played her roles sort of tongue in cheek and relaxed. Poor Nelson was stiff and uncomfortable."

Scott's World

There's no denying Brogan is a genuine authority on MacDonald movies. Of her 29 films — 25 of which were musicals — he has seen them all save three, Annabelle's Affairs, Don't Bet On Women and Oh For a Man.

All three were early movies printed on ancient nitrate film which have all but disappeared.

Brogan has seen Maytime — Jeanette's biggest box-office hit — 40 times. He's seen others almost as often.

The annual week-long club convention, drawing fans from Denmark, Australia, South Africa, Hungary, Switzerland and England, coincides with MacDonald's wedding anniversary to actor Gene Raymond.

"Jeanette held the first convention in 1962 to celebrate the 25th anniversary of her fan club as well as her wedding anniversary," said Brogan.

"We go to Forest Lawn and leave flowers at her grave — she's buried in the same area with Gracie Allen, Nat King Cole and Alan Ladd. Then we hold a reception at the Beverly Hilton hotel and spend the week watching her films.

"Gene Raymond is honorary president of the club and hosts our banquet. He also attends the showings of her films with us. We see about a dozen of them during the convention. This year MGM is showing a double feature for us.

"She made 18 of her films at the studio. But she also worked at Paramount, 20th Century-Fox and Universal. Her costars at MGM included Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy in San Francisco.

"People forget she and Chevalier made four pictures together. In addition to Love Parade there was One Hour With You, Love Me Tonight, and The Merry Widow."

Brogan never met Jeanette, nor have about half of the other club members. But Jeanette plays an important role in the young man's life nonetheless.

"The club has been responsible for some of my closest friendships," Brogan said. "There are about a dozen club members in New Hampshire and I see them regularly. Forty or 50 of us get together in New York every month or two for dinner and to see her films replayed in theaters.

"She was a wonderful woman on-screen and off. Our fan club helps keep that memory alive."

Dump a drink in the piano

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Rowles, the jazz pianist, is no Emily Post. But he can help with the fine points of fan etiquette for such events as the Newport Jazz Festival, in which he's playing this week.

As a veteran jazzman, he was asked how jazz fans should behave at concerts and in clubs. He gave it deep thought.

"Bring a musket. Particularly if the concert's outdoors. You can use it on fleas and chiggers."

Getting gravely drunk is equally acceptable, he points out, but "you should stagger up on the stand and knock everything over. Particularly the drums. And always spill a drink in the piano."

Does this improve the tone?

"Yes," he says. "It also keeps the piano player from getting too hot, as we say."

Newport Festival pays tribute to Billie Holiday

By DOLORES BARCLAY

NEW YORK (AP) — It was an evening of Easy Living and Strange Fruit Thursday, as the Newport Jazz Festival paid tribute to the late Billie Holiday.

In the tradition of jazz, festival promoter George Wein said, the musicians who participated in the concert did so out of love. And indeed there was a lot of hugging and kissing on the Carnegie Hall stage between such jazz greats as Zoot Sims, Harry (Sweets) Edison, Jimmy Rowles, Buck Clayton and Lionel Hampton.

"This concert is the ambiance, the feeling and the love that was Billie Holiday," Wein said.

She was a performer with a small voice who could color a song with blues styling and move an audience to tears. She died at the age of 44 on July 17, 1959.

Rowles, who had accompanied Miss Holiday on the piano, opened the concert with Milt Hinton on bass and Bobby Rosengarden on drums, playing the gentle and moody Easy Living. They were later joined by Zoot Sims on saxophone.

Seven set oil import curb ing was equally forceful in his remarks to the press conference.

The French president said the key to solving the energy problem did not lie solely among the major industrial nations — United States, France, Great Britain, Canada, Italy, Japan and West Germany.

It called for an equal display of responsibility by the oil producing countries, he said.

The Tokyo agreement marked the first time since the onset of the energy crisis that the industrial nations "had agreed to adopt a common attitude on three essential points — limits om importing oil, massive efforts to develop alternative energy sources, and eliminating practices conducive to encouraging higher prices," he said.

For Britain, France, West Germany and Italy the oil import restriction means adherence to the recent European Community agreement to limit imports to 1978 levels between 1980 and 1985.

The 1979 oil consumption quota for all European Community countries is 10 million barrels a day.

The four European summit nations agreed to ask their partners in the EC to specify their annual contributions to maintaining these overall levels.

Canada, Japan and the United States are to maintain their imports in 1980 at the levels of imports in 1979 taking into account their earlier agreement to reduce oil consumption by five per cent, in line with a decision of the international energy agency.

Japan has a 1985 target to keep imports between 6.3 million and 6.9 million barrels a day.

The United States has agreed that as a goal for 1985, import levels are not to exceed the levels of 1977 or the adjusted target for 1979. That is 8.5 million barrels per day.

The Tokyo declaration warns that inflation is gaining momentum and that higher oil prices and oil shortages have reduced the ability of countries to cope with inflation.

The OPEC price increase the communique states "are bound to have very serious economic and social consequences. They mean more world-wide inflation and less growth.

"That will lead to more unemployment, more balance of payment difficulty and will endanger stability in developing and developed countries alike."

Sanctions suspended

KUWAIT (UPI) — The heads of delegations to the Arab League Council, which concluded its sessions in Tunis Thursday night, have decided to hold off for one year any changes in economic and financial relations with Canada, the Kuwait news agency (Kuna) reported today.

Citing highly-placed Arab sources in the Tunisian capital, the agency said the decision, which was not made public, gave the Canadian government of Premier Joe Clark one year to clarify its stand regarding the Arab-Israeli conflict and the status of the holy city of Jerusalem.

Vic General ready to challenge gov't policy will force employees to formally request sick pay rather than receiving it automatically when they book off.

Hospital employees will also face higher food prices in the cafeteria, less vacation relief in the administrative and business departments and higher prescription-filling charges at the hospital pharmacy.

The board also agreed to eliminate all maintenance which is not absolutely essential, cut staff and board travelling allowances, increase laundry charges by 7½ per cent and raise out-of-province emergency fees.

Non-Canadians will have to pay $25 for an emergency department treatment while non-B.C. residents will pay $15. The standard rate for B.C. residents is $2.

The board decided to table for a time a suggestion that $10 be charged for non-emergency visits to the emergency department, rather than the standard $2.

The board also decided to eliminate the services of a commissionaire that patrols the doctors' parking lot at a cost of $10,000 a year and doctors will now pay a fee for hospital-sponsored seminars.

The board in addition will ask the provincial government to pick up some of the costs connected with planning the new Helmcken Road hospital.

TOWN TALK

Pierre Berton, graduate of the class of 1937 at Oak Bay high school and still as brash as ever, gave 1979 grads a parting message with a twist at recognition ceremonies in University Centre Wednesday night.

For those immediately heading out to work, Berton told them "university is no great thing anyway." Just don't stop learning — keep reading. "You'll be happier for it."

For the academically-minded, he said: "Marks are no big deal. They may get you through or your foot in the door of a job but a year later no one's going to ask you what your marks were.

"I found that the people who studied all the time were often failures in society. The most important thing is what goes on outside the class." If you have a choice between a high-paying job and doing something you like, "for heaven's sake take the job you like. In the end you'll do better at it."

At University of B.C. he had taken math and sciences intending to be a chemist, even though it was working for the Ubyssey student newspaper that he enjoyed. He scraped through before realizing he didn't want to be a chemist at all, and opted for writing.

Before being hired by Maclean's magazine, its editor — a friend of Berton's history professor — telephoned the prof, who said Berton "would have been a great scholar if he hadn't spent so much time working for that g-------- college newspaper."

"Just the kind of man we're looking for. I'll hire him tomorrow," the editor said.

"Thus endeth the first lesson," Berton said, and sat down to rousing applause from a sea of grinning graduates.

Quick now, how much would you think talk-show host Merv Griffin earns in a year? Half a million? More?

MERV
. . . free holiday

A guy in his income bracket, you might think, could well afford any luxurious holiday that catches his fancy.

Wrong, friends, dead wrong: B.C.'s tourism minister Don Phillips clearly knows something about Merv's true poverty-stricken state the rest of us don't know, because with Christian generosity he has offered the TV star a free holiday here.

According to a press release from the minister's office, Griffin "has been invited to vacation in B.C. as a guest of Tourism B.C."

We're told that in his letter extending the invitation, Phillips noted that on June 20 more than 100,000 British Columbians watched "with obvious joy and pride movie star Angie Dickinson rave about the super natural beauty of British Columbia on your show."

Pressing Merv to taste these pleasures for himself, Phillips' letter added: "British Columbians want to ensure that you personally experience and enjoy the many delights that our province has to offer, which your guest, the charming Angie Dickinson, talked about so glowingly."

Of course we do, Mr. Minister. Why, the first thought that struck us as we watched that show was: We just gotta invite ol' Merv up here so he can see for himself what Angie's raving about.

And anyway, the guy needs a decent holiday.

A four-man Japanese television crew arrived in B.C. Wednesday to start shooting two documentary films, one dealing with the forest industry and the other with the 50th anniversary of the establishment of Canadian-Japanese diplomatic relations.

The forestry program will cover timber inventory, reforestation, firefighting, research, logging and pulp and paper operations. Most of the footage will be shot on Vancouver Island.

Premier Bill Bennett's press secretary John Arnett is ending his three-year association with the premier's office to go into private consulting work.

Arnett, a civil servant, was frequently criticized for getting involved in political situations and for his over-protection of the premier.

The job is to be the liaison between the press and the premier, but many newsmen thought Arnett played guard-dog rather than communicator.

Arnett drew lots of heat from the newsmen who cover the legislature but the former Vancouver Sun reporter denies pressure or criticism led to his resignation from the $30,000-a-year job.

Three years is enough, he said. And a good opportunity in private industry presented itself.

* * *

Arthur, former special assistant to Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, had some rather hot and heavy go-rounds with media types during his stormy career on the inside of the Victoria political scene.

Weeks left government employ and was hired by Sterling Newspapers Ltd. as a consultant.

He's now, according to a news release announcing that the company's Peace River Block News is going daily this September, vice-president and general manager of Sterling.

Nice for Arthur, who is now in a position to oversee a sizeable number of the ink-stained wretches he once battled so merrily.

If you're big on boogying, note that the Century Inn's Forty Thieves disco has for the second year in a row been named the best spot to shake it on Vancouver Island.

The selection was made at a Western Canada disco awards banquet sponsored recently in Vancouver by CJOR and Roscoe's disco service.

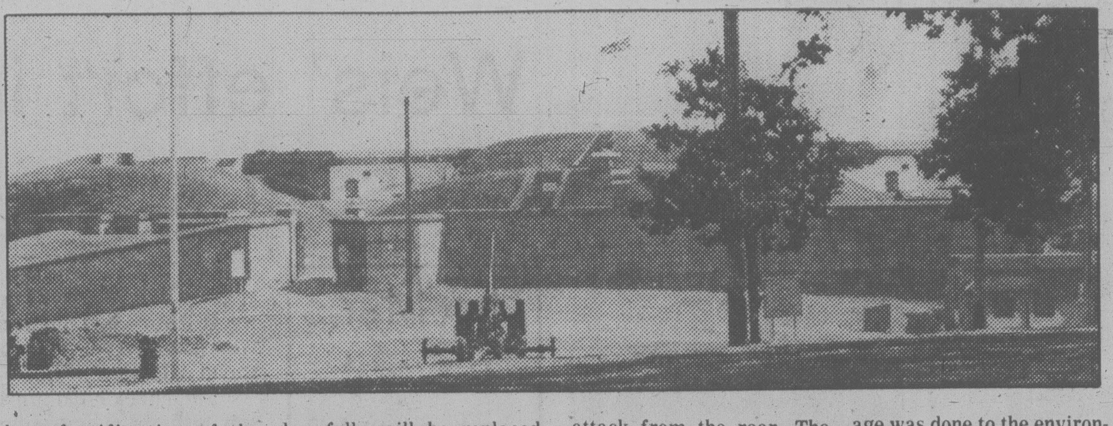
Walk of the Week

Take a stroll back into history

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff



A pleasant walk with a difference — actually a step into history — combined with a study of natural history is within easy reach of Victorians.

The place is Fort Rodd Hill Park in Colwood. Along with a stroll to adjacent Esquimalt Lagoon, teeming with birdlife and shore plants, it makes for an interesting and scenic outing.

Fort Rodd Hill, now a 200-acre national historic park, was named after First Lieutent John Rodd, who served on HMS Fisgard during the 1847 Royal Navy survey of Esquimalt harbor.

Designed by Royal Engineers and built and completed by Chinese labor around 1898, the fort was built because of a growing concern in England about Russian and German expansion policies at the turn of the century.

Once it bustled with Royal Marines, and in the First and Second World Wars with Canadian servicemen. It was declared obsolete in the 1950s.

Since it became a park, many of the artifacts and guns have been restored, but a disappearing gun manufactured at the turn of the century is still missing and hopefully will be replaced some day.

One of the things to look for is the red brick dwelling about 100 yards from the fort's entrance. It's a typical warrant officers' married quarters. One of its architectural features is its chimney pots, nearly a dozen, used for fireplaces and ventilation.

Within the fortification, notice the loophole walls, constructed in case of an attack from the rear. The underground magazine and plotting rooms also are fun to explore.

From a vantage point in the fort proper, look at the entire fortified area, and you will get some idea of the skill of royal engineers as landscapers. They built forts not only with an eye for defence but to conform with the surrounding terrain. They saw that minimal damage was done to the environment.

The second part of the day's outing can include walking or exploring the 120 acres of parkland adjacent and outside the fortified area, or along Esquimalt Lagoon.

Among the plants to watch for are wild onion, St. John's wort, beach pea, wormwood and glasswort. The tall grass is called American dune grass.

There are plenty of picnic areas at the lagoon. Fort Rodd Hill also has a few tables. So why not pack a lunch?

There are several ways to get to the park. The best route is via the Trans-Canada Highway from the city. Turn off at the underpass on to highway 17A for Colwood and watch for Fort Rodd Hill signs. Just before you reach Colwood Corner, turn left. The road will take you to the park.

GOOD OLD R & R (rest and recreation) comes in various forms. For the fortunate and well-heeled, it's a cruise to faraway places on vessels like the Fairsea. For fish packers at Ogden Point, it's time out for a smoke or a sandwich on the quayside, their backs turned to the symbol of opulence nearby.

Swimming approved at Beaver

Beaver Lake is now safe for swimming again but the mystery remains: Who or what polluted it?

Regional health officer Dr. Allan Arneil said Thursday the cause of recent contamination is somewhat puzzling because there is no residential development around Beaver Lake and in mid-May, when the fecal coliform count showed an increase, there was no significant rainfall to produce runoff from adjoining lands.

Provincial government standards require posting of signs in areas averaging 200 or more colonies per 100 millilitres.

After Beaver Lake passed the 200 mark signs warning swimmers were posted on the public beach, but they were removed when subsequent testing showed a return to cleaner conditions.

Another recently posted area, Langford's Glen Lake, has also been given clearance. But Prospect Lake, although showing a declining count, is still considered unfit for swimming, Arneil said.

He said the water testing by inspectors continues on a weekly basis but to date no explanation has been found for the high coliform counts a few weeks ago.

Even in the case of lakes that have homes around them, he said, "one should not jump to the conclusion that it is from human sewage. If that were the cause one wonders why the level should tail off instead of remaining constant."

Arneil said he wonders if the higher count might be caused by climatic conditions, for example a sudden rise in temperature resulting in a "turnover" effect with colder water rising to the surface.

Another question to be considered is the possible influence of natural phenomena such as an increase in the duck population.

Arneil said he would be interested to hear from local residents or groups who might have observed anything unusual about that time.

He said lake pollution has been more pronounced this year than in 1978. This is a matter for concern, both because lakes are more heavily used for recreational purposes and because bacteria live longer in fresh water than in the sea.

However, he stressed that the problem isn't widespread. Of 20 lakes tested, 13 had a low count of less than 10 and only two were above the 80 mark.

Rehiring guarantee denied by St. Joseph's chairman

She also denied the existence of a serious morale problem caused by board interference in school operation.

She said the board has not received a vote of no confidence from school staff or official complaints from parents.

Heaton resigned Wednesday because the board did not renew the contracts of two teachers.

All of the teachers have signed a vote of no confidence in the board and several have indicated they will not stay at the school after next year, he said.

Parents association president Whelda Steeves said Thursday parents are upset about the resignation and feel the board has taken on "supreme power."

She said an internal power struggle is harming school spirit.

Hudson said the board did not have morale problems before Heaton took over as principal in September.

She said the board has always confined itself to finances and general policy-making and had never interfered in the day-to-day running of the school.

"But if we see something wrong we must stop it."

She wouldn't elaborate.

Heaton has asked Roman Catholic Bishop Remi De Roo to examine the powers of parish-elected school boards.

He said the teachers were fired with two days notice after he was assured by former board chairman Henny Voorsluys no teachers were in danger of losing their jobs.

Voorsluys and two other trustees have resigned because they did not agree with the board's actions, according to Heaton.

But Hudson said they resigned for personal reasons unrelated to any disagreement over hiring practices.

Voorsluy resigned because he felt the board needed a stronger leader, she said.

Heaton has blamed the school's problems on flaws in the structure of the Catholic independent school system that allows trustees too much absolute control.

He is asking Bishop De Roo to appoint a superintendent of schools to oversee the operations, or establish a set of guidelines school boards must follow.

Victoria should have one Catholic school board administering the whole district instead of a series of local parish-elected boards that find it difficult to be objective.

Heaton said he will probably send his recommendations to Joe Phillipson, co-ordinator of independent schools for the education ministry.

Hudson said Thursday the charges are nonsense.

Ask the Times

Q. I've been told that some people have been on pension from the time they were born. Can that be true?
F.A.

A. Yes. One such person is Miss Millicent Barclay, daughter of Col. William Barclay. She was born on July 10, 1872, and became eligible for a Madras Military Fund pension to continue until her marriage. She died unmarried Oct. 26, 1969, having drawn the pension for every day of her 97 years and three months.

‘Politics’ idle Delesalle

Victoria's Philip Delesalle, the Canadian and Commonwealth men's gymnastics champion, isn't going to the Pan-Am Games in Puerto Rico because of internal politics and not because he is injured as a recent Canadian Press dispatch indicated.

Delesalle's name was missing from the Canadian team when the official list was released this week with the simple explanation . . . "sidelined with injuries".

But apparently not so.

The reason that Delesalle, 20, isn't going is because of a disagreement between Delesalle, his coach, UVic's Peter Kopac, also originally selected for the trip as a coach, and the Canadian selection committee.

It seems the committee wanted Delasalle and Kopac to report to Toronto on June 18 for a pre-competition camp.

Delsalle and Kopac protested and asked permission to report four or five days later because they felt the time could be better spent in Victoria, where the facilities were better.

After at first receiving an unofficial okay, they later were refused. It was then that Delesalle and Kopac asked out.

Kopac is not a full-time faculty member at UVic and has another position and one of his difficulties was getting the extra time off.

He agrees that Delesalle shouldn't necessarily have extra privileges just because he is Canada's best, but in this case it was a cirumstance that warranted an exception.

The committee apparently thought and ruled otherwise, and now Delesalle and Kopac will turn their attention to getting ready for the world championships in Forth Worth in December.

Delesalle is taking a short vacation which includes working out at the gym two or three times a week before serious training begins for the world.

A-ROLLING AND A-GROWLING, catcher John Stearns of New York Mets and Pittsburgh's Tim Foli cleared benches after home-plate collision during National Baseball League game Thursday. Foli, trying to score from second, charged into catcher. Pirates' on-deck hitter Lee Lacy and New York pitcher Neil Allen quickly got into action. Players from both benches followed. But no punches were thrown and peace was quickly restored. Mets won game on Stearns' home run. Story on page 25. (AP Wirephoto).

Seeds still falling in tennis shockers

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Guillermo Vilas beamed with triumph as he lifted the Wimbledon men's singles trophy high above his head — on movie screens all over the world. But there won't be a real-life repeat this year.

Vilas, who beats actor and sometimes tennis pro Dean Paul Martin in the movie Players, bowed out of the 1979 championship Thursday, beaten in four sets by an acrobatic 19-year-old American ranked just 41st in his own country. Vilas was the seventh of 16 seeds to fall in what is fast becoming the most open Wimbledon in years.

Tim Wilkison of Shelby, N.C., beat the sixth-seeded Vilas 5-7, 6-2, 6-1, 7-6 to earn a third-round meeting with Tom Okker.

There were fears today that top-seeded Bjorn Borg, bidding for his fourth successive Wimbledon title, might be forced to withdraw. The Swede, scheduled to play big-serving American Hank Pfister this afternoon, is suffering from a thigh injury and spent Thursday in intensive treatment.

Wilkison ended his match against Vilas with his shirt sweat-soaked and covered by grass stains, but the American teen-ager, watched by his mother and father, had little time to reflect on his big win before he hustled to partner John Sadri in a first-round men's doubles match.

"All my best results have been on grass," Wilkison said later. "I'm always trying to rush things, but when it got to the tie-breaker in the fourth, I just told myself to take my time and relax."

Vilas, who has won every major tournament except Wimbledon, was bitterly disappointed at his loss to the agile Wilkison.

No. 13 Manuel Orantes of Spain also fell, losing to little-known Frenchman Gilles Moretton 7-6, 3-6, 7-6, 3-6, 6-1.

Third-seeded Jimmy Connors lost the first set of his second-round match against 37-year-old Marty Riessen, but went on to win 6-7, 6-3, 7-6, 6-0.

Eighth-seeded Paraguayan Victor Pecci beat veteran Australian Phil Dent 6-4, 7-6, 6-3.

In the women's singles, top seeds Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd had a day off, but fourth-seeded Tracy Austin, who had a first-round bye, dropped the first set before coming back to beat South African Brigitte Cuypers 4-6, 6-1, 6-2.

"That was just the sort of match I needed," said Austin, a 16-year-old from Rolling Hills, Calif., who has won 20 of her last 21 singles matches. "I just need a couple more matches to get my concentration back."

Only two of the women's seeds failed to survive the second round: Sue Barker of Britain was beaten in the first round, while U.S. teenager Pam Shriver withdrew with a shoulder injury.

COWICHAN RIVER CLOSED

The British Columbia Fish and Wildlife branch has announced that the Cowichan River will be closed to brown trout anglers, effective Tuesday, July 3.

The closure is imposed once a catch of 300 trout has been recorded.

Creighton in line for Bruin vacancy

BOSTON (AP) — Fred Creighton, fired in the spring after helping build Atlanta Flames into a National Hockey League playoff contender for four years, appears to be the Boston Bruins' No. 1 choice as head coach.

Bruins general manager Harry Sinden, considered by most Boston players — in off-the-record conversations — as the logical one to assume the coaching duties from the now-departed Don Cherry, insisted Thursday that no decision has been reached.

However, Sinden did indicate in a telephone interview that Creighton is the Bruins' top choice.

"We talked with Creighton and others involved today, but nobody has been offered the job," Sinden said. "We have not offered a contract to anyone yet."

Sinden hedged on published reports originating in Toronto that Creighton will be offered the Boston coaching job next week.

However, he reiterated with a laughing "no way" when confronted with rumors he would return to the bench as coach.

‘Mod Squad’ on way

The NASCAR modifieds make their first appearance at Western Speedway Saturday night and Sunday afternoon in a weekend of racing that has been termed an Open Wheel Extravaganza.

Adding to the program will be the Sky Valley Racing Association from Seattle which will be bringing its open-wheeled sprint cars to the show.

In addition there will be Jalopy modified races on both days.

The NASCAR modified sportsmean class is also known as the "Mod Squad" and features open-wheel cars with late model bodies — Pintos, Gremlins, Arrows, Vegas and Monzas.

Among those expected to compete are Al Airlie in his '79 Arrow Plymouth, which won first place in this year's Motorama car show in Vancouver; and Doug Heath, winner of the NASCAR championship in 1978, in a Gremlin.

Times trials start at 7 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. Sunday.

Weis' effort in vain; Mussel streak ends

By JIM CREAR
Times Staff

If justice had anything to do with baseball, Dave Weis would have come up a winner Thursday night at Royal Athletic Park.

The knuckle-balling Victoria Mussel righthander was brilliant over 6⅔ innings of relief, allowing just one hit, but watched in frustration as his mates stranded 15 runners in a 6-4 loss to Grays Harbor Mets, the tail-enders in the Northwest League's northern division.

The same teams go at it again tonight at Athletic Park in a game starting at 6 p.m., moved ahead of the normal starting time by 90 minutes to permit Grays Harbor to catch a ferry. Lefthander Steve Hartery (1-1) gets the start for Mussels tonight.

Weis, who has yet to figure in a decision, relieved starter and loser Mario Avallone (1-2) in the third after the Mets had unloaded three home runs — a lead-off shot by Darrell Denby in the second and a pair of two-run pokes in the third by Dave Duff and Rusty Tillman.

The loss ended a four-game Mussel winning streak and left them with a 5-5 record while the win was the second in a row for the Mets, now 3-7.

Mussels, who counted three times in the first on Pete Rabassa's two-run single and an RBI hit by Nick Hopkins, left runners on base every inning but the fourth.

It's a situation that has worried manager Bill Bryk all season. He's taking a look today at Jeff Martin, an infielder from Lamar University in Beaumont, Tex., and is picking up a player from the Los Angeles Dodger organization, first baseman-outfielder Chris Gandy.

Gandy, a .290-plus hitter last year with Lethbridge in the Pioneer League, started this season with Clinton, Iowa, of the Class "A" Midwest League and may be in town today.

Mussels, who start a five-game road trip Saturday in Walla Walla, also announced their intention to sign pitcher Randy Holt of Vancouver, a righthander working out with the club. Holt is expected to join the team on its return next Thursday night against Bend.

An eighth-inning double by Tillman was the only hit off Weis, who allowed just four other Mets to reach base, three on walks and one hit batsman.

Grays Harbor used four pitchers. Starter David Smith failed to go the required five innings for the victory. It went instead to lefthander Tom Miller, the final and most effective reliever. He came on in the seventh to squelch a one-out, bases-loaded Mussel rally.

Duff, with a run-producing triple in the first to go with his homer, drove in three runs while Tillman had two RBIs.

Rabassa had three singles to plate three runs, boosting his team-leading batting average to .444 and giving him the club leadership in RBIs with 10.

The Macs have it at start

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Mark McCumber was taking it one shot at a time while Pat McGowan was following the advice of a colleague's caddy, but both golfers were leading the pack when the first round of the Memphis golf tournament ended Thursday.

McCumber, 28, winner of the Doral Open in March, and McGowan, 24, a second-year touring pro from California, went into today's second round at the 7,249-yard Colonial course with a pair of five-under-par 67s.

One stroke behind were Gary Koch and Tom Jenkins.

McCumber complained that he hasn't been playing well in recent weeks. He took two weeks off to return to his Jacksonville, Fla., home where he and his brothers are building a golf course. The rest did him good.

"This is the best I've done in seven or eight weeks," he said. "I'm taking one shot at a time and ignoring the consequences."

McGowan, whose best effort this year has been a tie for fourth at Phoenix, roared into contention late in the day with a string of birdies and a pair of long putts.

McGowan, with $72,616 in earnings during less than two years on the tour, said Lee Lynch, who caddies for 1977 winner Al Geiberger, suggested that he change his grip and slow his swing for the Colonial course.

"I've been swinging too hard," he said.

McGowan said his attitude has changed in recent weeks, too.

"I've been satisfied just making cuts instead of trying to win golf tournaments," he said. "I'm trying to win this one."

Phoenix group purchases Memphis club

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Phoenix insurance executive Leonard Lesser and five unnamed associates have purchased Memphis Rogues of the North American Soccer League for $2.6 million.

Rogues owner Harry Mangurian rejected an earlier offer of $1.3 million from a businessman from Kuwait, noting that he had invested $2 million in the club. The sale to Lesser's group is subject to approval of league board of governors.

"There will be no difficulty at all in receiving approval" of the sale," Lesser said. Moving the team is a different matter.

"The only problem is a playing site in the Phoenix area," Lesser said. Negotiations are underway with the city of Phoenix and Arizona State University in suburban Tempe for a stadium, he added.

Victoria trio bidding for basketball berths

Three University of Victoria regulars are heading east to bid for berths on Canada's national junior basketball teams.

They are Tracy McAra, an 18-year-old guard who was the second leading scorer with the women's Vikettes; Gerald Kazanowski and Kelly Dukeshire, a pair of rookies with the men's Vikings last season.

McAra, a graduate of Reynolds Secondary, will head for the junior women's tryout camp at Bishop's University in Lennoxville, Que. It starts July 12. If successful, McAra will accompany the Wayne Hussey-coached team to California for a series of exhibitions.

The 6-foot-8 Kazanowski, who competed for Canada the previous year, and the 6-foot-6 Dukeshire will try out with the junior men's team in Toronto, starting July 13.

Coached by Jack Kenyon of Mount Royal College in Calgary, the all-Canada squad will compete in the world junior men's championships in Brazil in August.

Draft proposal unacceptable

CALGARY (CP) — Ed Chynoweth, executive director of the Canadian Major Hockey League, said Thursday he can't understand why the National Hockey League has to negotiate with the NHL Players Association to lower the draft age.

"This gives some insight as to just how goofy this game is getting," Chynoweth said, "when the guys who pay the bills (NHL owners) have to negotiate with players about a subject which affects two groups (junior players and owners) who are not even members of the NHLPA."

Chynoweth noted that the NHL claims the proposal is part of a collective bargaining agreement but said he would be surprised if the league drew NHLPA executive director Alan Eagleson "into this trap since I am sure he is going to be most concerned about his present NHLPA members."

He said that if the NHLPA had to deal with the proposal it could be putting 42 of its present members' jobs on the line.

"What I mean is that if they (NHL teams) draft and sign the top 21 graduating players and then all of them draft and sign one 19-year-old player, that could mean the possible loss of 42 jobs.

"If I was a borderline or journeyman player I think I would be telling my NHL player representative to tell the NHL to solve their own problems."

Chynoweth said he finds it hard to accept the NHL's announcement that the league has agreed to pay the Swedish Ice Hockey Federation $50,000 a player if they play 40 NHL games, because the CMHL gets only $22,500 a player.

Russian in front

KIEL, West Germany (CP) — Vladimir Leontiev of the Soviet Union finished third behind fellow-countryman Ivan Borodinov in the third race Thursday to retain the lead in the world Flying Dutchman sailing championships. Keith Notary of the U. S. remined on top of the Tornado division. Terry McLaughlin of Toronto stood fourth in the Tornado standings.

Call Mitchs Butch a consistent jewel

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

If a punter puts his money on the six-year old black gelding Mitchs Butch, he'll get a run for it and, more often than not, the whole bite.

That was the Thursday night story at the suburban Sidney track as Mitchs Butch, owned by W. Landry of North Vancouver, trained by G. Brown and driven by Grant Hollingsworth, captured his third straight win and fourth of the standardbred meeting in the featured ninth pace for the biggest share of the $1,200 purse. Mitchs Butch returned $3.70.

In two other races here, Mitchs Butch has taken the place and in only one race has he finished out of the money, fading to fifth on June 4.

And it all works out to slightly more than $3,000 as Mitchs Butch's share of the Sandown purses.

And just as consistent as the results, have been the times. Mitchs Butch ran the mile in 2:04.1 Thursday and before that clicked off 2:04, 2:04 3/5, and 2:04 3/5.

And that, punters, is what so often is referred to as a jewel of consistency, and a handicapping tip to remember.

And in another, Hunters Quill was second in a strong performance and perhaps should be tabbed for the future book.

Otherwise, there was a another record of sorts set when Keith Linton, the meet's leading driver, failed to have a winner for the second straight night.

Linton is in no danger of being overtaken, however, and he did have two place finishes

Leonard Hill took the best advantage of the situation as he drove two winners — a first for him at the meeting — with Great Future in the eighth, and C.T. Chippewa ($5.50) in the 10th.

For Al Bowman and Jim Eaton it was a different success story. They each drove their first winner, Bowman with Eager Song ($5.00) in the first and Eaton with Quiet Majority ($6.60) in the third.

Cleveland seeking Lemon as manager

Times News Services

There was almost as much play off the major league baseball fields as there were on them Thursday.

For instance:

● Cleveland has asked for and received permission from New York Yankees to negotiate with Bob Lemon for the Indians' managerial job, the Cleveland Press reported today.

The fate of Indians' manager Jeff Torborg, whose team snapped a 10-game losing streak with a 6-3 victory over the Orioles at Baltimore on Thursday night, is to be decided this weekend.

Lemon, a former Indians pitching hero, was replaced by Billy Martin as Yankees manager earlier this month.

● The Philadelphia Inquirer says National League officials will probably today whether to suspend and fine Philadelphia Phillies manager Danny Ozark for ordering a pitcher to throw at a batter earlier this week.

The newspaper also says baseball commissioner Bowier Kuhn is looking into Ozark's conduct as well.

Ozark said Wednesday that he had ordered pitcher Kevin Saucier to throw at Mike Krukow when the Chicago Cubs pitcher came to bat in the seventh inning of a game that day. Krukow had hit Phillies outfielder Garry Maddox just half an inning before Saucier hit him.

● Pittsburgh Pirates acquired former NL batting champion Bill Madlock and relief pitcher Dave Roberts in a six-player trade that sent pitcher Ed Whitson to San Francisco Giants. The Pirates also received former major league infielder Lenny Randle and sent the Giants two minor-league pitchers, Al Holland and Fred Breining.

The 28-year-old Madlock, who began this season with a .325 career batting average, is batting .261 this season. Madlock isn't expected to join the Pirates until Sunday due to a death in his family.

And on the fields, there was more action, including another of those knockdown, drag-out battles between Texas Rangers and California Angels.

The pitchers were knocking down the batters and the batters were dragging themselves back up and hitting the ball.

After plenty of hits by the batters and some near-misses by the pitchers, the Rangers wound up on the long end of a wild 14-4 decision in the game between two of the AL West leaders.

The Rangers bolted to a 12-0 lead in the first two innings, belting 16 hits off three hapless California pitchers. That apparently got the Angels angry: in the third inning the Rangers' Pat Putnam was hit by a Steve Eddy pitch.

The next inning, California's Dan Ford was brushed back by Ranger starter Ferguson Jenkins.

The two rolled around after the collision, and both benches emptied toward the plate. No punches were thrown, and order was restored quickly.

Foxy mound effort cools Juan de Fuca

Elks-Athletics scored the only run of the game in the first inning and pitcher Ken Fox proved tough in the clutch to protect it in a 1-0 victory over Juan de Fuca Builders in Stuffy McGinnis Men's League play at Central Park Thursday.

Fox allowed four hits and struck out eight.

He got out of trouble in the first on two fly balls and a strikeout after walking the first two batters and he struck out losing pitcher Bob Fletcher after giving up a triple to Mark Christianson in the fifth.

In senior women's play at Hyacinth Park, Butler Brothers scored four runs in the seventh to defeat Capital City Pirates 5-4. Held to one hit until the final inning, Butlers erupted for four hits and, with the help of two bases on balls, produced the winning rally.

Mavis Underwood got the victory. She allowed 10 hits.

Combos whipped Strathcona Stingers 14-1 in the other game. Linda Newcombe was the winning pitcher. She allowed three hits and batted in two runs.

Joanne Grimsson and Pam Kozak each had three hits and scored three runs.

Brentwood Merchants edged Capital Builders 3-2 at Heywood Avenue Park. Dale Ewasiuk hit a home run and Gerry Doney and Bob Lougheed each drove in a run with singles for the winners. Stan Pritchard was the winning pitcher and Marv Carver the loser.

Mayfair Insurance defeated Trafalgar Legion 5-1 and Birch Builders downed Saints 8-3 in the Macdonald Park Men's League.

The annual Seaboard Invitational Holiday tournament, featuring clubs from Washington and Vancouver, will start Saturday at 10 a.m.

The tournament will run through the weekend and will be played at three fields, two at Central and at Heywood.

Other game times are Saturday, 12, 2, 4 and 6 p.m.; Sunday 10 a.m. and 12, 2, 4 and 6 p.m. and Monday at 9 and 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Select seven ready to try course along West Coast

If you happen to be around the Victoria waterfront on Saturday at 10 a.m. you'll be able to see the start of one of this area's most interesting races.

It won't be as spectacular a start as the Swiftsure because only seven boats are entered.

The race is the third West Coast Race, which is held on alternate years to the Victoria—Maui classic.

* * *

Two Victoria boats, Chris Justice's 42-foot ketch Bikini and Glenn Wakefield's 34-foot Sannu, are entered in this year's race, which is organized as in past years by the Royal Naval Sailing Association from HMCS Discovery in Vancouver.

Bikini is really a local product. She was built at Philbrook's shipyard in Sidney and is an experimental design by local marine architect Ian Ross.

Chris, who will have a crew of eight, is no stranger to ocean racing, having had more than his share in Britain before he decided to come to Canada. Locally, he's done his stimt aboard Lol Killam's Graybeard, the Swiftsure and Victoria-Maui champion.

Chris took Bikini down to Los Angeles last year and took part in the 930-mile Mazatlan race. Bikini does well in a good breeze and clocked 186 nautical miles in one 19-hour period. Chris is hoping for really stiff breezes this time around.

The 1977 winner, Bill Gardner's Lucy Alice, will be back to try and hold on to her championship. Bill, who is a veteran Victoria-Maui competitor, is one of the most colorful sailors around. Anyone who has seen him racing with his comfortable slippers on will testify to that.

Andy Robinson's pleasure cruiser Struan from Vancouver will give the competitors their start and accompany them around the course. The race is expected to take between four and six days.

Victoria will also have more than a passing interest in the Transpacific race to Honolulu which starts on Saturday from Los Angeles.

One of the competitors will be the people's favorite, the navy's ketch HMCS Oriole. Lt.-Cmdr. Bill Walker will have a crew of 24 aboard, most of them officer cadets from the Naval Officers Training School in CFB Esquimalt. His regular coxswain MS Michael MacDonald will also be on hand. AB R.L. Maclam from the minesweeper HMVCS Fundy is along as cook and AB William Boyd from the destroyer HMCS Yukon rounds out the crew.

A modified handicap system is being used for this year's Transpac. All entries will race in one division, the new system being a combination of adjusted International Offshore Rule Mark II ratings and time allowances.

The system will use a handicap distance of 2,000 miles although the rhumbline distance of the race is actually 2,225 nautical miles.

Three changes have been incorporated into the handicap system — a uniform centre of gravity factor, a modified standard engine-propellor factor and a modified displacement-length factor.

* * *

Locally, most yacht clubs have no races this weekend so that their members can get a chancs to compete in the second annual Sidney regatta this weekend. Registration takes place Saturday from 6 to 9 a.m. in the lobby of the Sidney Hotel and on Sunday at 9:45 a.m.

Ferry travellers and boaters alike will be heading in droves on Sunday for the 30th annual Dominion Day lamb barbecue on Saturna Island.

Things get under way on Saturna beach at 11 a.m. with children's sports and games for all age groups.

There will hot dogs and coffee as well as the traditional servings of barbecued lamb, which are expected to be ready to eat a little after 2 p.m. Organizers are expecting to topple last year's record when 1,400 plates of lamb were consumed. The price is $5 for adults and $2 for children.

SANDRA POST ONE SHOT BEHIND LEADER

Pointing to success

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — A chance encounter with an old pro got Barbara Barrow's golf game pointed in the right direction.

"Last week I ran into a teacher who worked with me and changed my alignment," Barrow beamed Thursday. "Now I'm hitting the ball straight."

The 24-year-old had reason to smile. She combined her straight and long drives with nimble putting for a three-under-par 69 and a share of the first-round lead in a 72-hole $150,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament at the Dearborn Country Club course.

Debbie Austin used booming tee shots to fire six birdies, four on the back nine holes, to tie Barrow. Defending champion Sandra Post, a native of Oakville, Ont., headed a group of five with two-under-par 70s.

The standings were clogged even more at 71, with a 10-player standoff.

Cathy Sherk of Port Colborne, Ont., had an opening-round 75, while Dale Shaw of Victoria, the only other Canadian competing, struggled to an embarrassing 90 — high score on the day.

Barrow headed directly to the practice tee after the round, her lowest on the tour. She practised for hours, using the new stance she learned in Chicago last week from Dee Dee Owens, a teaching professional.

"I usually draw the ball and now I'm lining up better and hitting it straight — but I don't have it down just yet," said the former national collegiate champion, a resident of Chula Vista, Calif.

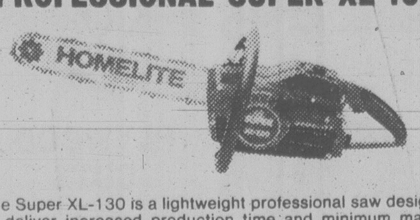
CHAIN SAWS
PROFESSIONAL SUPER XL-130



The Super XL-130 is a lightweight professional saw designed to deliver increased production time and minimum maintenance. The saw has no points and no condensor, thereby eliminating the necessity of replacement, and spark plug life is extended with the increased voltage from the Solid State module. The increased voltage at crank speed provides a hotter spark for more efficient combustion and even burning of fuel, resulting in easier starts. In addition to a cast aluminum piston and a large finned cylinder to cool and enhance engine performance. The Super XL-130 is also available with safety brake.

Anderson, Mahovlic share city junior lead

There is usually a new name to ponder when a golf tournament takes place and Thursday's opening round of the Victoria City junior men's championship at Glen Meadows was no exception.

The 18-year old from Glen Meadows, who has been playing golf there for only two years, shot a five-over-par 77 to finish in a tie with with Jon Mahovlic of Royal Colwood.

Today the home-course advantage went to Mahovlic as the final round of the 36-hole tournament switched to Royal Colwood.

Mark Callan and Kerry Taylor of Uplands and Brian Degirolamo of Gorge Vale are tied with 78s, one stroke behind, while defending champion Glen Barlow of Colwood, Don Singlehurst of Colwood and Ed Hatheway of Victoria are at 79 and Dave Cormier of Glen Meadows at 80.

There is also a tie for first place in the juvenile (16-and-under) division. Sharing first with 81s are Keith Austin of Victoria Club and Bob Lean of Colwood. Blair Philip of Glen Meadows leads the divot (14-and-under) division with 83 and Jack Anderson of Saltspring is on top of the handicap section with 98-36—62.

Disco lights warning given

OTTAWA (CP) — The Radiation Protection Bureau is issuing guides to operators of laser lights, used in discotheques and pop festivals, warning of possible eye damage if the lights are directed at their audiences.

Dr. Peter Waight, chief of the consumer and clinical hazards division, said Thursday the lights can cause serious eye damage.

Waight said the guides, in the form of a letter, would be mailed shortly to laser light operators recommending they point the lights higher.

He said the bureau would make no regulations about the safety of the lights. Regulations governing the use of the machines fall under provincial jurisdiction, Waight said.

Meanwhile, health protection officials have prepared new regulations for the design, construction and functioning of sunlamps, Waight said.

The lamps emit high-intensity ultra-violet light and could cause serious sunburn and eye damage. They are used mainly for medical purposes and by suntan worshippers.

The proposed regulations would make 10-minute timers mandatory on all devices, with new designs so the lamps cannot be connected to regular household light sockets.

Sunlamps would also be equipped with protective eye wear and with clearly marked radiation warning signs with a complete list of possible side effects that could be expected from over-exposure.

MUSIC CRITIC with fingers plugging out sounds of an Owen Sound, Ont. band is five-year-old Peter Langlois. The band gamely played on, perhaps interpreting the young fellow's gesture merely as a defence against their robust playing for Canada Week celebrations.

Metrics timing questioned

OTTAWA (FP) — The new Progressive Conservative government is committed to re-examining the timing of the implementation of the metric system in this country, a spokesman for Trade Minister Robert de Cotret said Thursday.

However he said the minister at this time is not prepared to establish a firm time-table for that study.

"We intend to examine the whole issue of the Metric Commission and the speed at which it has been moving to implement the metric system in this country. But just when that study will be launched we are not prepared to say," said the spokesman in the minister's office.

A Progressive Conservative party research paper completed prior to the general election by researcher Michael MacDonald found that Canadians had been misled concerning the advantage of going metric.

Companies hog time in courts, study shows

OTTAWA (CP) — Companies are the big users of civil courts in Canada and win a much higher percentage of lawsuits than individuals, a Statistics Canada research study says.

"There are an awful lot of Goliaths, and when they take a David to court, they win," Paul Reed, an author of the study, said in an interview.

Statistics Canada said the study by Reed and Craig McKie, both with the justice statistics division, is the first of its kind in Canada and may be the largest carried out anywhere.

It was ordered following conferences of government and legal officials in 1973. Delegates felt that more statistical information might cast light on court delays.

The resulting survey dealt with 13,815 cases at all court levels in 1971. It doesn't include Ontario cases because the province refused to take part in the survey.

The survey excluded welfare, divorce and criminal cases that found their way into civil courts.

What the researchers found was inadequate record-keeping that made it impossible to determine how long more than one-third of cases took before resolution.

Some findings that appeared general were:

— Forty per cent of cases involved a company suing an individual, usually for an unpaid debt.

— Eighty five per cent of those suing had lawyers while only 31 per cent of the sued had legal advice.

— Practically no one fended off a lawsuit without a lawyer's help. One defendant in 10 with a lawyer was able to do so.

— Half of all cases were settled out of court. When there was a trial, the person or company suing won in 75 per cent of the cases.

Gathering of clans opened

HALIFAX (CP) — Halifax was bedecked with plaid and blasted with bagpipes Thursday as Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, opened the 1979 International Gathering of the Clans.

The Halifax Metro Centre, packed with 10,000 spectators, was the scene of the event which caps the opening days of the Queen Mother's first visit to Canada since 1974.

Today she is scheduled to travel to Toronto.

The 78-year-old Queen Mother, dressed in a pink gown encrusted with jewels and wearing a diamond tiara, was heralded into the arena by six lavishly-costumed trumpeters who sounded her arrival with a flourish.

The Gathering, which is expected to attract at least 40,000 Scottish visitors to the province by mid-August, was cost-shared by the federal and provincial governments.

The Queen Mother was officially welcomed by Elmer MacKay, new minister of the federal department of regional economic expansion, Nova Scotia Premier John Buchanan, and by Gordon A. Archibald, chairman of the Gathering.

Earlier, she visited patients and members of the Canadian legion at Camp Hill hospital, unfurled a flag at Province House marking the International Year of the Child and dedicated a statue of Sir Winston Churchill at a library.

Fingerprint records equality for women

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP's new computerized fingerprint scanning system will for the first time allow the force to identify female fingerprints automatically.

Chief Superintendent Chris Tiller said Thursday the old system was so small only male prints could be stored in it. Female prints had to be identified manually.

The force has 1.4 million full sets of fingerprints on file — those of every person ever charged with a crime, Tiller said at a press demonstration.

Single fingerprints of those with active criminals records are kept separate to quickly identify prints found at crime scenes, he said.

The new system can sort and store 400,000 prints — eight times more than the system it is replacing. It is the first fully-automated finger-print storage system in the world and can identify prints from 100 crime scenes each day.

Developed by Rockwell International specifically for Canada, it is expected to be fully operational by 1980. Police forces across Canada will have access to the file in RCMP headquarters here.

Each fingerprint is unique and the computer identifies prints according to their individual patterns.

Labatt's 'lite' label headache for judges

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada reserved judgment Thursday on whether the average Canadian beer drinker would know exactly what he or she was getting when ordering a "Labatt's Special Lite."

The brewery put its new brand of beer on the market sometime ago but inspectors of the Food and Drugs Act in British Columbia seized the brew on the grounds it did not comply with government regulations for light beer.

These regulations say alcoholic content of light beer should be no more than 2.5 per cent by volume. The Labatt product contains four per cent. The normal product contains up to eight or more per cent alcohol by volume.

Lawyers for Labatt argued in the Supreme Court that the Food and Drug Act is aimed at products below set standards. The Labatt beer was above the government standard.

They also said the Act was framed for protection of health and said it was obvious that Labatt's lite beer with its low alcoholic content was not a danger to health.

They said the "lite" label was only to tell the average beer tippler that this particular brand contained less alcohol and less calories than most other brands.

B.C.'s mail-order institute starts paper chase in fall

By PAUL MINVIELLE
Times Staff

A degree from B.C.'s emerging mail-order school should have as about as much status as a one from a conventional college or university.

That's the opinion of John Ellis, principal of the 14-month-old Open Learning Institute. The new school will open its post office box to students in September with an offering of four high school subjects and three university courses.

Ellis is in Victoria on a whirlwind round of radio, television and newspaper interviews to publicize the school's September opening.

By January, the Open Learning Institute will expand its offerings to 18 university courses, more high school subjects and 15 career, technical and vocational subjects.

The institute was launched a year ago with the widest possible mandate to make education available to British Columbians in their homes, no matter where they happen to live.

Ellis said OLI is a logical development of the province's post-secondary education system. There was only one university in the province in the 1960s, but there are now three universities, 14 community colleges and six institutes.

"Every major community in B.C. now has a post-secondary institution and it is no longer possible to improve access to education or range of courses by building institutions," Ellis said.

OLI's offerings are expected to include some 90 university courses by 1983 or 1984. If that seems a long way off, Ellis suggested that students enrolling in the institute this fall would have difficulty completing courses at a faster rate than they are being completed.

The quality of an OLI degree will depend to a large degree on the quality of the people preparing the material, and Ellis says the institute is hiring the best available.

"We have to be sure that our courses are equal to those offered by existing institutions," he said. "Our course consultants must be of the same order or better. Our tutors must be as well qualified or better. We must be assured that creditable people are associated with all phases of the institute."

Ellis suggested that the quality of the actual courses will be open to scrutiny.

"There's nothing vague about our courses," he said. "Everything is published."

When a student is finished two courses, he or she will be subjected to stiff examinations of his or her mastery of the particular areas studied.

In full operation, OLI should have something for just about everyone, from short upgrading seminars in the trades and professions to complete bachelor degrees in the Arts or Sciences.

Asked about the approximately $3½ million the program will have cost by September, Ellis smiled and pointed out that OLI doesn't have a $40 million campus. Instead, there is leased office space in Richmond and a warehouse.

"Our capital commitment is to creating courses, not to bricks and mortar."

The cost to a student at the university level will be $60 a course, but again, Ellis pointed to the savings incurred by not having to travel to a university. The student can also stay with his job, the housewife can continue to be a homemaker, the handicapped need not leave home.

The high school courses being offered this fall will enable a student to complete grade 10.

"And that's terribly important in today's society," said Ellis.

Anyone wanting to enter an apprenticeship training program must have grade 10.

Kath Faryon's patchwork & quilting

Summer is here and the weather is just right for being outside. Whether you're en route to a cottage, camping, off to the tennis court or golf course, or just working outside in the garden, you'll find this Patch 'N Go Tote a terrific project to take along to work on in spare moments.

When it's finished you'll be able to use it for all the articles you want to take with you! Why not make a hat to match? Just applique the maple leaf motif onto the brim.

The tote is an easy project for the patchwork beginner. It is made of just four blocks per side panel, two of which are pieces, two of which are quilted. You can learn both the easy patchwork techniques and hand or machine quilting.

To make it super easy, we've given you plastic see-through templates for the triangles and squares. Just trace and cut pieces out of scraps you have on hand, or you can order our Kit No. TBK-401 which comes complete with all materials and directions required.

We've chosen a blue denim material with white, and red prints for the maple leaf patchwork and trim. It's a perfect accessory item for jeans or skirts and T-shirts.

The use of quilting and patchwork adds greatly to the bag's design and it also makes it a one-of-a-kind original. Tote bags are indispensable at any time of the year, but especially in the summer it seems. (Of course, I'm always accused of carrying my "filing cabinet" along with me . . .)

If you're a new mother, this bag will be just the right size for toting along a few diapers and a bottle. If you're taking toddlers to the beach or pool, the tote will be just the thing for carrying the towels, bathing suits and snacks.

The tote bag surface is a canvas on which you can place any design made with patchwork, applique, embroidery, crewel work, quilting stitches, fabric paints,crayons, ets. This particular version (see illustration) employs just the simplest of designs, but to advantage! We've used red perle cotton thread for the maple leaf quilting stitch design to pick up the red in the patchwork prints.

This is an ideal project to make on a Quilt-A-Block, a portable unit on which you can quilt one block at a time. It allows you to take along your quilting project and work on it wherever family and friends assemble — not just at home.

You can never have too many totes. Wouldn't this one also make a beautiful gift to present to a visitor to Canada?

TB-401 PATCH 'N GO MAPLE LEAF TOTE: Complete directions for easy-to-make bag plus template set for maple leaf motif. (The template may be used over and over again for other projects — even quilts.) $2.50.

TBK—401 COMPLETE KIT for making above tote includes pattern, templates and all necessary materials. Fabric colors are blue denim, white, and red prints for patchwork. $10.00.

QUILT—A—BLOCK FRAME ideal for quilting blocks up to 11 inches square. Instructions, and all hardware and handy storage box included. You can make anything from pot holders to full-size quilts — easily one block at a time. $8.50.

To order send your name, address and postal code, along with a check or money order to: HEARTHSIDE PATTERNS, c/o Victoria Times, P.O. Box 9120, Station E, Edmonton, Alta. T5P 4K2.

FAMILY

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 17-year-old girl. I quit high school to work and save enough money for college. My mom helped me get a fantastic job.

I want to move into an apartment closer to my job. I've already made plans and even got myself a roommate.

I'm not running away from home or anything like that. I just want to be independent and get out from under my mom's protective wing.

Here's my problem: I'm afraid my mom won't let me move out, especially when she finds out my roommate is my boyfriend.

I love my mother and don't want to hurt her, but ships weren't meant to sit in the harbor forever. What do you think?

TROUBLED

DEAR TROUBLED: I can understand your desire of independence, but you're no ship. And even if you were, leaving your berth at 17 to sail the uncharted seas of a live-in arrangement could put you on the rocks in no time.

DEAR ABBY: I was engaged to be married in August. I ordered my bridal gown and four bridesmaid's dresses. It came to a sizeable amount.

I have lot of other bills, plus car payments to make, so I am strapped financially.

Two weeks after the dresses were ordered, my$ fiance broke our engagement, saying he had had serious doubts for over a month about whether we should marry. He said he has now finally summoned the nerve to tell me that he is sure it would be a mistake and we should call it off.

Abby, since he had "serious doubts" at the time the drasses were ordered, I think he should have told me. When I placed that order I had no idea he was having doubts.

Now I am informed that because the dresses were specially ordered they cannot be returned.

Is my ex-fiance responsible for this bill?

EX—BRIDE—TO—BE

DEAR EX: I think your ex-fiance has a moral obligation to pay for the gowns but, if he doesn't think so, you may have to resort to legal action. Perhaps just the mention of it might producé results. Try it.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a good provider for his family which consists of me (age 31) plus our four daughters, 12, 10, 8 and 6.

I lost a baby two years ago. I am enclosing a picture of me. As you can see, I am pregnant and the doctor says I'm carrying twins. My husband took that picture. It's one of the few he's ever taken of me with all my clothes on, which brings me to my problem.

You see, my husband is camera crazy, and for the last three years he has insisted on taking pictures of me and or daughters in various stages of undress as well as in the nude.

How can I get across to my husband that the girls are getting too big for these "family portraits" (as he calls them).

Also, I don't feel like posing in various stages of undress while pregnant, but he insists it doesn't matter.

Am I out of line for putting my foot down?

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH

DEAR ENOUGH: No I think your husband has an unhealthy preoccupation with nudity. You can get your message across to him by refusing to pose unless fully clothed, and instruct the girls to do likewise.

Better care urged

SASKATOON (CP) — Day care services must be improved for the good of children, not for the good of parents, the director of youth services at the Regina Mental Health Clinic says.

"We have to re-think day care," psychologist Terry Russell said on the second day of the four-day national convention of the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada.

"It's not there to ensure that women in cities can go working, because women have already gone working. It's there to ensure that children can grow and grow well."

He used day care as an example of measures that can be used to secure basic human rights for children by helping families.

The concept of children's rights means protection for children, the psychologist said. They have a right to equality of opportunity in life, and "our goal must be to ensure that the family can deliver it."

Russell proposed expanding availability of day care, including recreation space in housing projects and allowing new parents leave from work without losing seniority.

The 500 delegates of the 50,000-member rural women's organization passed resolutions calling for child custody legislation, amendments to the Canada Pension Plan and old age pension schemes, stricter advertising regulations and an over-all policy for hazardous waste disposal.

Life's work from short visit

Elizabeth Forbes

Shortly before the Second World War, Marie C. (Mollie) Crickmay, a British-trained speech therapist, came to Canada for what was to be a short visit with relatives in Edmonton and friends on the Pacific Coast.

However, fate decreed that visit would extend over 40 years and with only occasional vacations spent back in England.

This weekend, in Victoria, Miss Crickmay is retiring from her profession and she is now planning to reverse that story.

"I'm going to England on a lengthy visit," she says. "I'll take time to explore places I know and some I don't know.

"If I find a country spot not too far from London that I like, I'll probably settle there for the rest of my life — and visit this part of Canada for occasional vacations."

Should that happen it will be under entirely different circumstances from 40 years ago.

"I had a good position in London," she recalls, "but I got caught out here when war was declared and I couldn't get back."

She needed money and that meant she had to find work. So, for a time, she did talks from Vancouver for CBC radio.

"Speech therapy was practically unknown here," she says, "and I tried to cover the field, training, the actual therapy and even children's speech and behavior problems."

Through that effort Mollie Crickmay became the first speech therapist in B.C.

When those radio talks concluded, she moved on to Victoria and here she persuaded the school board to let her start work with public school children.

"It was on a six-month trial," she told me with a reminiscent smile. "The schools were scattered and I went from one to another on a bicycle I purchased for $12."

At the end of that trial run the school board was sold on the idea.

"They gave me a small room for an office in a wooden building on the Central School grounds and I continued the program from there.

It was oOnly part-time, however, because as she explains it, "I wanted to keep my options open."

That meant working part-time as well with a cerebral palsy clinic (later to be expanded into the G.R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children) as well as doing some private practice work and, in 1961, starting to give several hours three times a week for speech therapy at Gorge Road Hospital.

"The need was so great everywhere I looked I couldn't seem to split myself into enough pieces."

Eventually she was able to turn her cerebral palsy work over to Mrs. Rose Bannister, also British-trained.

That opened the way for full time at Gorge Hospital and for pioneer work there in stroke rehabilitation, a field in which she has undoubtedly become outstanding in this province.

There are scores of stroke patients, particularly in the Victoira area, who can attest to her extraordinary sensibility, patience and resourcefulness, her warm personality and her sense of humor, as she helped them to regain not only speech, but self-respect.

"Not in every case," she says with honesty. "There were those beyond help. The majority, however, have received some benefit, and with many, a very great deal of benefit."

Here she pointed proudly to a day clinic for stroke rehabilitation, established at Gorge Hospital a few years ago, in which she has been actively associated.

"In the beginning, people in our stroke rehabilitation program had to stay in the hospital.

"Now, with the clinic open, they can be discharged and brought back when required. Not only that, while they are here they can combine physio, occupational and speech therapy, all at the same time."

Another phase of Miss Crickmay's professional career has seen her active in cleft palate correction.

She started when, as she puts it, "cleft palate operations were not as good as they are today and patients were left with some terrible speech defects."

Now, she adds, treatment can start within days of a child's birth. Operations have become more sophisticated "and with the co-operation, combined skills and miraculous work of orthodonstists and plastic surgeons, the speech therapist is not so desperately needed."

On the other hand, more and more speech therapists are being trained and employed in various other fields.

Forty years ago, there were degree courses in England and the United States, but none in Canada.

Today, courses are available at the University of British Columbia, Alberta, Western Ontario, Toronto, McGill and Dalhousie.

When she started the school program here, she was alone in the work. Now there are four speech therapists on the regular staff.

The program at Gorge Hospital has expanded and while she is turning over work there to another British-trained therapist, Mrs. Patricia Page, there are those on staff now who were trained by her and influenced by her knowledge and dedication.

On top of all this, Mollie Crickmay is the author of two successful books, the first on cerebral palsy, now in its fifth printing and translated into four other languages and another issued in 1977, aimed at helping families of stroke victims with day-to-day problems they have to face.

"I want to write more," she tells you. "Not necessarily about ~~my work~~ but about the experiences I have had throughout my life."

And whether it is in some country spot over in England or, if she decides against that as many friends here predict, in the comfortable Rockland Avenue apartment that she plans to maintain until she makes a final decision, Mollie Crickmay will write.

Adolescence takes careful listening

We live in the outlying districts of a large city. It is difficult for us to get the psychological guidance we feel we need with our two adolescent sons. You are obviously interested in psychological medicine so we thought you might have some practical suggestion about how to get through this difficult period. — Mrs. B.A.

Dear Mrs. A.:

Adolescence is a difficult period for parents, but it is especially difficult for adolescents themselves. For them, this is a period of emotional conflicts, confusion and frustration. Their behavior patterns can become extremely irritating to the adults who surround them.

Physically, the adolescent is reaching a mature, adult size. Emotionally, they are just being graduated from the post-puberty phase. Because of their size, adults may make demands on them that they are not ready to assume.

Lost in their own conflicts, they try to extricate themselves from their dilemma by lashing out in behavior that is rebellious and unacceptable. This may be their own protective device because they are not yet able to express their own distress in words that are meaningful to their parents. Nor have they yet attained the age of accomplishment where they can enjoy the dignity of being listened to by adults.

The art of listening to them is a highly developed skill. For this reason, it often takes and astute psychologist or psychiatrist to help them discuss the problems of growing up.

Since their problems are very special ones, the practice of medicine is now expanding its horizons with the creation of the important specialty of adolescent medicine. Doctors trained in this specialty are taking adventage of adolescents' visits and encouraging them to try to express their inner feelings and emotions.

It is an artistic endeavor for doctors to get them to reveal thir inner feelings without invading their privacy. The sanctity of their discussions with doctors must never be violated, for if they once lose faith in the integrity of that privacy the chance for recapturing it is small.

Although you live far from a medical centre, it should not isolate you. There now are many excellent books which can guide you in the understanding of the problems that beset your sons.

Canadians spend less time with TV

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canadians appear to be spending less of their spare time sitting in front of their television sets, a Canadian statistical analyst has told a meeting on leisure studies.

Terry Cheney said a study has found that although television remains among the most popular leisure activity, Canadians appear to be turning to other activities, particularly reading.

Cheney, a former Statistics Canada analyst now working as a consultant, said Canadians surveyed reported they spent 12.4 hours a week watching television in 1978, down from 12.9 hours in a 1972 survey.

In terms of total leisure activity, however, the proportion of time spent watching television has declined dramatically, Cheney told a U.S. national endowment for the arts colloquim on leisure studies.

Blastoff! Even from a tiny scratch

Joan Watson

for consumers

A short time ago I was invited to the lab of scientist Dr. David Barham to watch an experiment involving pop bottles.

Certain designs of 1½-litre bottles exploded when tipped over on a vinyl tile over cement floor. Further tests on other sizes and designs showed that an impressive number of other bottles exploded too, not by being dropped, but simply by being toppled.

A news announcement about the bottles' vulnerability has started an investigation by the federal government. The question is: should the bottles be redesigned or recalled?

But there is more to the pop bottle story than that. Most consumers have never been told that bottles of any carbonated beverage should be handled with care. The contents are bottled under pressure. That means that when they break they also explode and glass fragments fly.

I don't think we've been made aware either that a scratch on a bottle weakens it. And once a crack starts from a scratch it won't stop of its own accord. It accelerates.

If you want to know the scientific reason, Barham explains that the amount of unbroken glass area left to bear the stress decreases as the crack spreads, and boom, you have an explosion. If there are no scratches, then the glass is as strong as steel.

But believe it or not, even a speck of dust falling on to a glass surface is enough to scratch it and give a crack a place to start. And that's not dust falling when the glass is molten. That's on solid glass.

And then glass becomes even weaker when it's wet. Nobody seems to know why. But a skilled glass cutter knows he can scratch his product, wet his thumb, run it over the scratch and snick, the glass breaks on the line he's drawn.

So you can imagine what happens to glass bottles as they are filled, packed to the store, stacked and eventually carried home. With careful handling a pressurized glass bottle is no more dangerous than a car driven by a good driver. But mishandled, the best design will fail.

Some consumer rules for handling bottles of carbonated beverages: don't drop a full bottle. You can't break one without having an explosion. It's the same as a balloon breaking. Don't let youngsters attempt to carry more than they can safely handle.

Avoid letting full bottles rattle together in a grocery bag or in the car. A scratch could lead to a crack and that would mean an explosion.

Never put a bottle in the freezer. The expansion caused by water turning to ice will soon fill the empty bottle neck. And it doesn't even take a trip to the freezer to cause this type of failure. Sometimes the cool air flowing into the refrigerator compartment will cause freezing. Put the bottles in the door or the area planned for pop bottle storage.

Heating a bottle will also cause trouble. This can happen in the trunk of a car or at a picnic.

A change from heat to cold will also cause an explosion. Consider the summertime trip to the cottage. Bottles of pop are in the trunk of your car. The weather is hot and the road is bumpy. The beverage gets warm and shaken and the pressure inside has increased a little.

When you get to the cottage you probably put the bottles in the fridge or perhaps in the cold lake or river. The outside of the bottle suddenly cools but the inside is still warm. Off goes the pop bottle. The larger the container, and the greater the difference in temperature between the warm bottle and the cool surroundings, the greater the chance of failure. That's an example of thermal shock. A trip from the store on a hot day and your home refrigerator could cause the same result.

With wired-in stoppers, such as champagne bottles, don't shake before opening even if you like the idea of festive foaming. And don't point the bottle at anyone. Keep your own face well back from the flying stopper.

With a screw-top pop bottle, sometimes the thread on the screw cap is not as deep as it should be and caps spontaneously blow off after only a small twist. Make sure your hand is over the cap as you turn it.

$3-$4 buys bed for night in many Ontario hostels

Lucy Izon

youth on the move

If you're going to be travelling in Ontario on a tight budget this summer, here are some ways you can keep your costs down.

For those who are looking for the least expensive accommodation available, there will be 14 youth hostels offering accommodation for $3 to $4 per night.

In Ottawa, the youth hostel is a converted jail at 75 Nicholas St., in Red River, you will be able to find one at St. Barnabas Anglican Church (on Highway 17). In Toronto, there will be a hostel operating but the exact location is undecided. However, if you're in Niagara Falls, you can find a new one at 4699 Zimmerman.

In southwestern Ontario, Stratford has a large facility open year-round accommodating up to 125 people at 45 Waterloo. In London there will be one at 433 Wellington.

If you're going through Orillia, there isn't a hostel but if you go to 18 Peter St. North, (Tel. 326-7743) they can arrange a stay in a local home. Also, in the holiday area at Collingwood, the year-round Blue Mountain hostel has room for 70 people.

If you're heading through northern Ontario, you'll find a new YH in Sudbury at 278 Lloyd, but it only holds 12 people. In Sault Ste. Marie you can try the Evergreen Motel at 1447 Frank. Thunder Bay will have a new location at Lakeshore Drive and McKenzie Station. In Kenora there will be one operating at Boulton's Camp on Long Bow Lake.

Youth hostels are not to everyone's taste. They are inexpensive but there are drawbacks. Many have curfews and most are set up with dormitory accommodation. As a result, many young travellers prefer to camp in provincial or national parks. What you should know is that these parks are not without their rules.

You may have heard of an alcohol ban in some of Ontario's provincial parks and it was true, although it ended on June 17. But Algonquin and Quetico parks still have a ban on cans and bottles. And a note of warning: if you're planning to set up a tent to claim a good site, and then take off for a day or more, your equipment can be confiscated. The rule is you can only leave for eight hours during the first 24-hour period.

There are 128 provincial parks within the province and the nightly camping permits vary between $5 and $7 per vehicle, depending on the site's facilities. It is now possible to make reservations for some of the parks during the busy holiday period. For more details on these locations and reservations, you can write Provincial Parks, 3rd floor, Whitney Block, Queen's Park, Toronto M7B 1W3.

If you're interested in taking a canoe trip this summer but hesitant because of a lack of experience, try the Association of Student Councils (AOSC). It has organized weekly Ontario trips.

You don't have to be a student to participate, but the age limits of participants are 17 and 35. During July and August, there will be weekly departures from Toronto to Algonquin Park, with the eight-day trips (Sunday to Sunday) costing $189. Starting in August there will also be eight-day trips to Killarney for $209.

The prices include equipment, park fees, guide and food. All you need is a sleeping bag and the ability to swim. Each group will be limited to 15 people. For more information, you should contact AOSC, 44 St. George St., Toronto, Ont. M5S 2E4.

If you choose to do your first canoe trip without an organized group, here are a few pointers from Bruce Mohun, a guide for AOSC excursions.

First, think size when renting a canoe, especially if you've planned portages. Three people should fit a 15-foot canoe so stick to that size. If it's over 17 feet long, it will be awkward for one person to carry and the ideal is to have two people carry packs and one carry the canoe. Of course, if there are more than three of you, use a longer canoe, with two carrying it

Forget the packs with racks on them. They're awkward. Stick to canvas. Don't take too many clothes — you'll have enough to carry. Stick to layers that can be removed as the weather changes. Don't forget a long-sleeved shirt that you can button up to protect from bugs, and baggy pants rather than jeans.

For temporary repairs on a fibreglas canoe, you can use tuck tape available at any hardware store. You can also do quick repairs on a cedar strip canoe with birch bark that's plastered down with a mixture of pine sap, sugar and water.

No short-cut to being taller

YOUTH CLINIC

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker.

DEAR DR. POWELL: Can you suggest any food, sports or exercises that can help a person be taller?

I am a female and going to be 14 in a few weeks. I think I am too short. I am only 4 feet, 11 inches, I would like to be 5 feet, 6 inches. Since nobody in my family is tall, there is not much chance I'll be tall.

ANSWER: Height is something we cannot do anything about. Usually short parents have short children. Stop thinking you are too short.

There is no magic potion you can drink to grow taller, either. These potions only exist in fairy tales. Fortunately you may still grow a little more. Most girls do not complete this growth until the age of 15 or 16.

You may reach five feet. Learn to be happy with yourself and your body and then your height will not matter to you or anyone else.

There are a very small mumber of children and adolescents who fail to grow in height who can be treated by a growth hormone. These individuals are very short and for them medical diagnosis and treatment is important and makes a tremendous change in their growth pattern.

DEAR DR. LEVINE: This is in answer to the girl who wrote saying she was in love with her teacher. I have to emphasize that your advice was right. I've been there.

Five years ago I fell in love with one of my teachers. He wasn't exactly a "hunk," but he was very nice to me and I fell for it. He was also very understanding, and knowing what I felt for him handled it very gently and offered just to be friends. Friendship graduated to coolness, and now we hardly ever speak to each other. Needless to say, I am still recovering.

My advice to males and females who feel attracted to their teachers is to find interest elsewhere. There is almost no chance of fulfilment, and you'll spare yourself a lot of hurt.

ANSWER: Thanks for the advice. In your case, your teacher seems to have handled your "crush" well, and yet you are still suffering to some extent. Think of the pain involved if he had encouraged it to develop to mutual romance and physical intimacy.

We can't always put a "lock" on our emotions, and that's good; it allows individual freedom, choice and in fact makes human beings so interesting. But we can keep our eyes open and know when situations are dangerous or potentially destructive, usually well in advance.

DEAR DR. COTTER: I am 15, and a year ago I met a man in his late 20s and I think I've fallen in love with him. My head says forget him, but my heart tells me not to let go. I've tried to forget him for over eight months now and I just can't. Do you think I should? Or should I tell him how I feel? Maybe if I know how he feels and it's not the same as I do, it would be easier to leave him behind. I don't know if he's married or not.

ANSWER: I think you should talk to him and tell him how you feel. You must be careful you do not let him exploit you, since you really do not seem to know much about him.

Falling is love is a matter of the emotions, or the heart. Being committed to love in faithfulness and with determination is where both the head and the heart must work together. I think your head's warning in this case is justified, but it is good, nevertheless, to have strong feelings of love.

DEAR MR. VICHERT: I am 16½ years old and consider myself fairly mature. I attend a private girls' school and attend dances at other high schools. Because I don't go to a mixed school, the only time I get to socialize with boys is when I go to these dances.

The problem is that my parents don't want me dating on a one-to-one basis and every time I ask if I can go out with a boy, the answer is a three-hour debate and I always end up defeated. They say they trust me completely yet they also say I'm still too young.

ANSWER: It is difficult to want something and to have your parents disagree. I believe you are old enough to date, providing your behavior and attitudes indicate to your parents that this is a safe thing for you to do. You say that your parents trust you so I would hope that they will demonstrate this trust by beginning to let you date.

Is it because they lack trust in the boys that you might date, or don't they know them? Is it possible for you to invite some of them home so your parents can meet them and get to know them?

I don't believe there is a magical age when, all of a sudden, it is permissible to date. I think parents make this decision based on their assessment of the maturity of their daughter. Perhaps you could discuss with your parents what they mean by too young? What do they expect you to have achieved to demonstrate that you are "old enough"?

Could you reach the compromise that under certain conditions you could go on a "one-to-one" date? The conditions could include the time you have to be home and the type of events you may attend. If this goes well your parents may be willing to extend their limitations.

Setting life goals seen way to curb smoking

OTTAWA (CP) — Teach children about life and "smoking will be cared for automatically," according to Dr. Robert Wake of the Canadian Council on Smoking and Health.

Wake told the fourth world conference on smoking and health that duscussing health hazards caused by smoking may not be effective because of "youth's reluctance to adopt a long-term life view."

Teen-agers may be reluctant to think of life after 45 years of age, but they should be encouraged to establish an integrated set of long-term goals, he said.

"It should be possible to remind them that goals are pursued with difficulty in the absence of good health and that health is inevitably hindered by the use of the filthy weed," he said.

Wake said parents who smoke set a model for their children. Even if parents forbid smoking, teen-agers will start smoking because they see it as a symbol of independence and maturity.

Kurt Baumgartner, council executive director, said the theory of "everything in moderation" may apply to dieting, fitness and drinking but "there is no such thing as smoking in moderation."

He said the tobacco industry lobby in Canada is powerful, leaving "the onus of providing any kind of education program on smoking and health on the health agencies."

PLAY THE NAMEGAME
GAME No. 1 OFFICIAL ENTRY FORM BELOW!

WIN! $1,000.00 IN CASH PRIZES EVERY OTHER WEEK!

WIN! GRAND PRIZE TRIP FOR TWO TO HAWAII, By WARDAIR!

The object is to match the official letters published every day with the letters in the grid which you have filled in with your name (see samples 1 and 2). When you have circled a row of letters across, vertically, or diagonally either way, send your entry in for the bi-weekly draw for cash prizes. You may submit as many entries as you wish per game, but each must be in a separate envelope.

THE NAME GAME
Rules and Procedures

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.
1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print your name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.
Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.
2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday and Sunday and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist but may only be used once in any one entry.
3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.
4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.
5. All entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in the Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.
6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.
7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.
8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.
9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to the The Name Game will be final.

SURPRISE GIFTS were presented to Mrs. Anne Palmer and Mrs. Dorothy Charlot, centre holding wall plaque, by youngsters from Braefoot elementary school. Women operated small store in their home at 3970 Braefoot and children decided to surprise them with tokens of their respect when store closed Thursday. Youngsters said small fry shoppers were always treated kindly.

Order of Canada goes to Augustyn and Orr

OTTAWA (CP) — Ballet dancer Frank Augustyn and former hockey player Bobby Orr are among 62 people appointed to the Order of Canada Friday.

Announced by Gov.-Gen. Ed Schreyer, the appointments include a couple who helped launch the Stratford Shakespearean Festival and an RCMP officer who helped break up the French connection, a drug ring which smuggled poppy seeds from Turkey in the 1960s.

Canada's highest distinction has three levels — companion, officer and member.

John Polanyi, whose discoveries about molecules enabled him to predict the development of lasers; Wishart Spence, a former justice of the Supreme Court of Canada; Most Rev. Georges-Henri Levesque, founder of National University of Rwanda and Paul Gerin-Lajoie, architect of educational reform in Quebec, are new companions of the order.

Among the 19 new officers are Augustyn, Orr, Gordon Sinclair, Toronto broadcast and journalist; Harry Gunning, University of Alberta president, and Patrick McTaggart-Cowan, former executive director of the Science Council of Canada.

The 39 new members include Alfred Bell and his wife Dama, the Stratford couple; Gilles Poissant, the RCMP officer; Alexander Brott, founder-conductor of the McGill Chamber Orchestra; Art Dixon, former Speaker of the Alberta legislature, and Claire Haddad, a fashion designer.

The Governor-General will present the orders formally at a fall investiture. Appointments to the order are made by the Governor-General and a seven-member committee.

Among the new officers are:

Augustyn; Most Rev. Maurice Baudoux, former archbishop of Saint-Boniface, Man.; Louis-Philippe Bonneau, Montmagny, Que., health sciences adviser to the executive vice-rector at Laval University; Sylvain Cloutier, Ottawa, deputy minister of transport.

"See? It turns itself into a sliding board!"

Contract Bridge ♠♥♦♣ B. Jay Becker

Test Your Dummy Play

You are declarer with the West hand at Six Clubs and North leads a trump, South following suit. How would you play the hand?

West		East
♠AJ9	N	♠7
♡J	W E	♡ A104
◇ QJ63	S	◇ A852
♣KQ972		♣ AJ1083

This is one of those hands where you are sure to make the contract regardless of how the North-South cards are divided — assuming, of course, that you play the hand correctly.

It is clear from the start that you have no spade or heart losers, since you can ruff your two spade losers in your hand. It is also clear that the slam is ice-cold if the missing diamonds are divided 3-2, in which case your only possible loser is a diamond trick. Therefore, the only distributions you should concern yourself with, and try to prepare for, are those where the missing diamonds are divided 4-1 or 5-0.

Your first step should be to draw the one missing trump, and your next step should be to eliminate all your spades and hearts from both hands so that you then can deal effectively with a 4-1 or 5-0 diamond division. In line with that, you therefore cash the ace of hearts and ruff a heart, then cash the ace of spades and ruff a spade.

You next ruff the ten of hearts in your hand and the jack of spades in dummy, at which point you're all set to tackle the key suit, diamonds.

You now play the deuce of diamonds from dummy. Let's first assume that South is the player with four or five diamonds to the king. In that case, you easily make the contract if he climbs up with the king. If he follows low instead, you win with the jack, play a low diamond back to dummy's ace, and lead a third diamond toward your Q-6.

Second, let's assume that North has the four or five diamonds to the king. If he wins the first diamond lead from dummy to your jack, he cannot afford a diamond return because you would win his ten return with your queen or his seven return with dummy's eight. In either case, you would not lose a second diamond trick. North cannot effectively return a spade or a heart either; this would give you a ruff-discard and a twelfth trick.

If North ducks your jack of diamonds (holding, say, the K-10-9-7), he is merely prolonging his agony. You lead a low diamond towards dummy and play low after West produces the nine. This again makes North's cause hopeless.

Married or single, you go into business, you invest and imprint your own style. You enjoy travel and food and could have a weight problem.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Tony had been very quiet for quite a while, busy at his desk, "You're being very sociable," Ann Complained. "What are you doing?"

"Just a little thing I discovered about our street number," her husband replied. "Added to the sum of its three digits it makes five times what you get if you reverse the order of those digits."

What was the number?

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Not till the loom is silent
And the shuttles cease to fly
Will God unroll the canvas
And explain the reason why
The dark threads are as needful
In the weavers skillful hand
As the threads of gold and silver
In the pattern he has planned
His wife Nel and children

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.

A summery show all year

GARDENING

Hilda Beastall

Ornamental grasses grown from seed in the amateur's garden are a natural extension from the growing of the so-called "Everlasting" flowers. The grasses when dried by a similar method as used for the flowers, add a light and airy grace to the more solid flower forms, thus creating summer-like bouquets for indoor decoration when fresh flowers may be scarce or costly.

The word artificial can never be applied to dried arrangements, for they have been living plants and are now preserved at a stage of perfection.

Sunny weather brings the plants along well just now, for most of these grasses and flowers are annuals, needing early summer warmth to bring them into flower. This is the time when daily checking must be done, for the grass stems are cut as soon as the flowers have fully developed.

If left to begin drying on the plants, the grass seeds will drop and the beauty of the grass is lost. The Everlastings develop more slowly.

As with lavender, cut the stems on a dry day when no dew remains on the grass heads. Their color will then remain clear and distinctive. To complete the drying process, lay the stems flat on paper in an airy, dry room out of direct sunlight.

The group known as Everlastings are conventional flowering plants with recognizable flowers (unlike grasses, which gardeners in general do not recognize as having flowers) in several attractive colors.

The Helichrysum is a genus of the Daisy Family and is perhaps the best known Everlasting flower. Grown from seed sown in greenhouse or dwelling in early spring, the plants have their flower stems ready for cutting from the garden about the end of July in a dry sunny season.

Stems are cut when the flower buds show their color. Don't wait for them to open because then the yellow centre is exposed and becomes black when dried. Cut in the colored bud stage, the flowers open as they dry.

In general, cut the stems on a right dry day to avoid any trace of moisture on the flowers. Cut when buds are colored but not opened. Spread flat on paper in a cook, airy place for a few days and then hang in small bunches, heads downwards from an overhead wire where they can remain for several weeks to thoroughly dry the striaght stiff stems.

At least one flowering Everlasting requires different drying treatment. The genus Limonium has the common name of Sea-lavender. Limonium latifolium is also listed in some seed catalogues as Statice latifolium, and gardeners call it Sea-lavender. This sends up several wiry stemmed, branched flower sprays of lavender-colored tiny flowers, rising from broad, almost succulent-looking shiny basal leaves.

This is an enduring perennial plant for gardens, for the flowers are dainty and ornamental whether cut for drying or left on the plants, where they remain in good condition until late fall rain and frost makes them into compost.

This Sea-lavender or Statice is similar in shape and general floral appearance to the better-known Baby's-breath (Gypsophila) but with lavender flowers in place of white. Both these plants may have sprays cut whenever suitably opened and may be at once used as dried flowers. If for this purpose do not put them into water or the stems (and the flowers) will be waterlogged and liable to rot.

Both these flowers can be also used as fresh flowers in water with other garden flowers.

Interior timber supplies dwindle

VERNON (CP) — Tightening timber supplies may make it difficult for lumber operations in the north Okanagan to continue at their present capacity, says a provincial forestry official.

"It's getting pretty tight," Paul Teroe, Kamloops zone officer for the forest ministry, said in an interview Thursday.

Teroe said a preliminary analysis shows that large lumber operations have increased their capacity to the point where timber supplies cannot be maintained if logging continues at its present pace.

An analysis of timber supplies in the south-central part of the province now is being conducted, he said, and will form the basis for setting future timber allocations.

Timber supplies could be reduced further if cutting is curtailed in the sprawling Graystokes region southeast of Vernon due to public concern over high-elevation logging.

The ministry has established a public advisory group to make recommendations on how much timber can be harvested from the area.

Truckers' blockades being lifted

NEW YORK (AP) — Truckers have pulled back from blockades in New England and National Guard soldiers have begun to go home in other states, but motor freight traffic remains widely disrupted as violence continues to mark the independent truck drivers strike.

Rigs that had blocked three major central Massachusetts truck stops for two weeks pulled away Thursday, and drivers said they hope the federal government will meet their demands for more and cheaper diesel fuel, higher speed limits and fewer highway regulations.

Connecticut truckers said they will discontinue sporadic fuel pump blockades. Picket lines came down in Michigan and at a major truck stop near Denver. Washington state truckers returned to the road.

More trucks were reported pulling up to produce docks in Virginia, where farmers in Accomack and Northampton counties have been unable to get potatoes and other crops to market.

There were no reports of widespread food shortages, but grocers had to scramble for supplies. Charles Gill of the Associated Grocers in Wyoming, Kansas and Colorado, said he has purchased beef from local packing plants and arranged rail shipments of oranges from Florida and potatoes from California.

California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. promised to announce a plan to ease the diesel fuel shortage so California produce can be taken to market. Fruit and vegetable crop losses already are estimated in the millions of dollars.

Pickets withdrew from oil terminals in Greensboro and Charlotte, N.C., Thursday in response to a court order. National Guards armed with rifles and automatic pistols were stationed at the terminals to prevent disruption of gasoline shipments.

Thirty-year-old Luther Hawkins Moates, 30, of Duncan, S.C., received superficial wounds Thursday when a bullet shattered his steering wheel as he drove near Cecilton, Md.

A driver escaped unharmed in a sniper attack north of Denver and several rigs fell victim to nails scattered on Highway 10 near Mobile, Ala.

Meanwhile, Florida National Guard soldiers went home after driving gasoline trucks to relieve strike-caused shortages, and Minnesota authorities reduced the number of guards on escort duty.

40 twisters rip through Iowa towns

MANSON, Iowa (AP) — Tornadoes raked the Iowa Plains Thursday night, wiping out neighborhoods and forcing evacuation of a small town where two tanks holding a toxic chemical ruptured. Five persons were killed and about 70 others were injured, authorities said.

About 40 twisters uprooted trees, knocked out power and telephone lines and ripped through homes and businesses in six communities in northern and central Iowa, officials said.

The National Guard was called out to help the two hardest hit towns, Manson and Algona, which were preparing to start a week-long celebration of their 125th anniversary Saturday.

Tornadoes also were reported in Minnesota, North Dakota, Colorado and Arkansas. Some damage was reported in those states but no deaths or serious injuries.

Three persons were killed and about two dozen injured in Manson, officials said. Initial reports said four persons were killed. About 24 businesses and 100 homes were reported destroyed or heavily damaged.

A police spokesman said no homes were left in an area from downtown to the southeast edge of town. "It's just gone, clear out to the edge of town," the spokesman said. "The houses are gone."

"It's a mess, I'll tell you," Ricklefs said as he surveyed damage in the farming town of 1,900. "It just flattened houses. The streets are all blocked."

In Algona, 65 kilometres to the north, twisters heavily damaged a shopping centre and a 100-square-block area. Two persons died early today at a Rochester, Minn., hospital where they were taken after the storm. One remained in serious condition there. Seven others were in hospitals in Algona and 35 others were treated and released, officials said.

De Guingand dies at 79

LONDON (AP) — Maj.-Gen. Sir Francis de Guingand, a leading British architect of the Allied victory in the Second World War, died today at his home in Cannes, France. The retired soldier, chairman of the Rothmans tobacco firm, was 79.

De Guingand was chief of staff to Field Marshal Viscount Bernard Montgomery and was the peacemaker in the clashes between Monty and U.S. Gen. Dwight Eisenhower. The cause of death was not reported.

"The glamor of public renown has not fallen on de Guingand . . . yet he was a generous contributor to victory," wrote the late Lord Leslie Hore-Belisha, Britain's wartime secretary of state for war. "His cool, practical and judicious brain and his diplomatic skill in smoothing over human difficulties were the supplement to Montgomery's genius."

De Guingand served Montgomery from the historic Battle of El Alamein against the Germans in North Africa in 1942 until after the end of the war in Europe, when a change of mind by Montgomery impelled his junior to retire from the British army.

In his memoirs, Brass Hat to Bowler Hat, de Guingand wrote that when Montgomery was made chief of the imperial staff, he appointed him vice-chief, then revoked the decision, saying the appointment "wouldn't do me any good."

Nevertheless, de Guingand as a civilian remained loyal to his old chief and at the age of 76 was a pallbearer at Montgomery's funeral.

On his return to civilian life, London-born de Guingand moved to Rhodesia to become a farmer. But within a few months he put this idea aside and joined the board of the Alpha Cement Co. in Johannesburg, South Africa, and thus set out on a major new career as an industrialist.

He was director and international director of the Rothmans tobacco group and had previously been chairman of the Carreras tobacco company.

With other prominent figures, he was associated with the South Africa Foundation, formed in Johannesburg "to present the positive South African story to the world."

Party crashed -by speeding car

CHICAGO (AP) — Three black men, apparently enraged because they were ordered to leave a street party in a white and Latin neighborhood, returned in their car a few minutes later and plowed through the crowd, killing a woman and injuring eight persons, police say.

Witnesses said the trouble began as a small band was performing in a street of the modest residential area. There also was singing and disco dancing. Most of those taking part were teenagers.

Police said the three blacks drove past, heard the music and stopped to listen.

Anthony Kuesis, 14, said two of the men began dancing in the street.

"Someone in the party asked them to leave because it was a private thing and as they did they pushed some of the kids aside," said Kuesis.

The car went up the street and about five minutes later came tearing back and "it looked like it was going about 50 miles (80 kilometres) an hour," said Kuesis. "The crowd scattered but some couldn't get out of the way fast enough."

Canadians top energy users

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians, on a per capita basis, consume more energy than any other people in the Western industrialized world, even outguzzling the seemingly unquenchable thirst of the Americans.

However, the apparent greediness of resource-rich Canadians is offset somewhat by the realization that the country's harsh climate and unique transportation network play a major role in calculating the consistently high totals.

Latest statistics (1977) from the International Energy Agency show the average Canadian uses the equivalent of 8.7 tons of oil a year. That compares with 8.3 in the U.S., 4.25 in West Germany, 3.8 for the United Kingdom and three tons for Japan.

And this country has topped a list of 19 Western countries since 1970.

A federal energy department spokesman said coal, oil, natural gas and electricity are the primary energy sources used to gather the statistics. Conversion from one unit of measurement to the equivalent in tons of oil is not necessarily accurate, he said.

At the same time, the price Canadians pay for their oil—$12.75 a barrel, increasing by $1 Sunday—is the lowest among the seven countries gathered at the Tokyo economic summit.

Canadians pay only about two thirds of world oil prices because the government provides generous oil-price subsidies.

The spokesmen said the cold winter climate and long distances required to travel result in Canadians using more energy on a per capita basis than countries with larger populations.

Canadians use more fuel oil than Americans but less gasoline and oil products, the figures show.

The high standard of living enjoyed in both countries has lead to the use of energy for so-called luxury items, such as electric toothbrushes, that also contributes to the U.S. and Canadian figures.

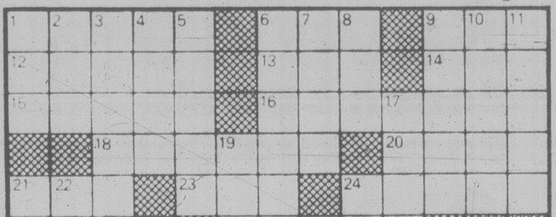
Answer to yesterday's puzzle.



Theodore Bernstein dies at 74

NEW YORK (AP) — Theodore Bernstein, a retired editor of The Times and a highly regarded authority on the English language, has died of cancer at the age of 74.

Bernstein, who died Wednesday at his Manhattan home, was described by The Times as an editor whose decisions "were a major influence on the writing, editing and display of news that The Times printed from around the world."

Bernstein joined the newspaper in 1925 and later served as news editor and assistant managing editor. He was in charge of all Second World War coverage for the newspaper.

In 1960, he founded and was the editor of The Times' international edition in Paris, which later merged with another newspaper to become the International Herald Tribune.

He served as editorial director of the newspaper's book division and as executive editor of The New York Times Almanac from 1969 to 1971, when he became a consulting editor.

After his retirement in 1972, Bernstein wrote a column on language three times a week for The Times Special Feature Syndicate.

He is survived by a son, Eric. A memorial service was scheduled for noon Friday at Temple Emanu-El in Manhattan.

Haig leaves NATO

CASTEAU, Belgium (AP) — Gen. Alexander Haig retired today as NATO's supreme military commander, said he plans to speak out on defence issues back home in the United States but declared he has no immediate political plans.

The 54-year-old general, who narrowly escaped assassination in a terrorist bombing attack here last Monday, is sometimes mentioned as a possible 1980 Republican candidate for the U.S. presidency.

He said that on his return to the U.S. he plans to tour the country "to speak out publicly of the concerns that I have in the (military) security area."

As Supreme Allied Commander Europe, Haig warned repeatedly of a military build-up by the Soviet bloc and what he said was a need for stepped-up NATO defence preparedness.

Basques start bomb blitz against Spanish tourism

MADRID (AP) — Basque terrorist bombs went off today in three coastal resorts as separatist guerrillas stepped up their avowed terror campaign to cripple the Spanish tourist industry. Police said there were no injuries in the explosions and damage was slight.

Authorities received a telephone threat and evacuated 180 occupants of the Hotel Cimbel in the Mediterranean town of Benidorm before dawn and a bomb exploded two hours later. Some of the frightened tourists immediately asked for their bills and checked out.

Police said bomb damage was confined to a garden area and only a few plants were destroyed.

Earlier a bomb exploded in a photo shop in Benidorm, north of the city of Alicante on Spain's eastern coast. Police ordered extra patrols around the city, a favorite resort for British vacationers.

The latest explosions brought to five the number of bombings reported since the separatist organization ETA — a Basque-language acronym for Basque Land and Liberty — warned earlier this week it would attack the tourist industry and attempt to harass transportation. Tourism is Spain's No. 1 revenue maker, having earned $4.9 billion last year.

The Associated Press office in London today received a typewritten communique bearing the mark of ETA, claiming responsibility for the two earlier bombings.

The communique warned of more bombs set to go off in Spanish tourist areas. ETA, which clams more than 40 political slayings so far this year, wants an estimated 100 ETA suspects in jail moved from a central prison to one in the Basque province of northern Spain.

A London correspondent of the newspaper El Pais said hundreds of airline reservations to Spain have been cancelled.

China head count 975,230,000

PEKING (Reuter) — China said Thursday that it had 975,230,000 people at the end of 1978 if figures for Taiwan are included.

The state statistical bureau did not give a separate figure for Taiwan which, however, has said its population at the end of last year was 17.2 million.

But if Peking did use Taipei's figure, it would indicate that slightly more than 958 million live in the People's Republic.

The figure would be about five million higher by now, however, since the bureau said the population growth rate — births less deaths — is 1.2 per cent. The official target for next year is one per cent, and the goal for 1985 is 0.5 per cent.

Trade figures were published for the first time and showed a deficit last year of $1.2 billion.

The bureau also listed many figures relating to the economy.

The bureau said exports rose 20 per cent to $10.48 billion, while imports increased 41.1 per cent to $11.71 billion.

"Non-trading income of 1978 exceeded expenditures by $1.3 billion," the Xinhua (Hsinhua) news agency said.

House backs Carter's Rhodesia trade blocks

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The U.S. House of Representatives has given President Carter an important foreign-policy victory by endorsing his decision to retain trade sanctions against Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

By an overwhelming margin of 350 to 37, it voted Thursday night to allow the president to maintain sanctions if he finds it is in the national interest to do so.

The action puts the House at odds with the Senate which on June 12 voted 52 to 41 to require the president to remove the trade bars.

Eventually, the two chambers will have to reconcile their positions on the issue but it appeared likely that the result would leave the president with the flexibility he wants to co-ordinate his southern Africa policies with Britain.

The administration-backed bill before the House was a compromise that recognized that the April elections in Zimbabwe Rhodesia constituted a significant step toward a multi-racial democracy.

The bill also notes that Britain has not yet taken steps to recognize new Salisbury government and calls on the president to promote a speedy end to the Zimbabwe Rhodesian conflict.

Finally, the bill states that the sanctions shall be terminated "unless the president determines it would not be in our national interest to do so."

Mandatory jail for news leaks

EAST BERLIN (Reuter) — East Germany on Thursday passed a law making the supply of non-classified information to Western organizations such as news media a punishable offence.

A minimum jail term of two years and a maximum 12 years is prescribed for those convicted of breaking the law.

The new law, which replaces former provisions against treasonous breach of confidence, is aimed at anyone helping not only foreign intelligence services but also what are simply termed "foreign organizations."

The new crime, The Treasonous Supply of Information, covers the collection or supply of "information damaging the interests of the (East) German Democratic Republic which does not come under the rules of secrecy."

Scientists disagree on pot

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is no evidence of short-term danger from smoking Mexico's paraquat-sprayed marijuana, two scientists told the House of Representatives select narcotics committee Thursday.

But Dr. Michael Rose, a senior toxicologist with a Imperial Chemical Industries Ltd., a British paraquet manufacturer, and Dr. Richard Thomas, a senior toxicologist with Mitre Corp., which has done independent studies on the pesticide, said no studies have been done to determine long-range effects of inhaling paraquat.

The testimony conflicted with a statement by Joseph Califano, U.S. secretary of health, education and welfare, that paraquat could cause lung damage to about 2,000 marijuana smokers in the southwestern U.S.

All three scientists agreed that even small amounts of paraquat can scar lung tissue and produce shortness of breath or even death from suffocation.

Rose and Thomas said tests on animals have found that even the heaviest concentrations of paraquat on Mexican marijuana would not put enough into a marijuana smoker's lungs to cause harm.

But Dr. Rinate Kimbrough, a toxicologist at the federal disease control centre, said she believes the paraquat can accumulate in lungs and cause damage.

Chemist Kenneth Davis said controlled tests now being set up should produce a clearer answer to the danger in six to 18 months.

Meanwhile, in New York, a researcher told the second annual conference on marijuana that prolonged daily use of the drug causes monkeys to become tense, irritable and unable to cope.

Scientists said the observation may explain the paranoia, defensiveness and withdrawal sometimes suffered by human marijuana smokers.

Young Cousteau dies when seaplane flips

COUSTEAU
. . . drowned in Tagus

ALVERCA, Portugal (AP) — Phillipe Cousteau, 37-year-old son of French oceanographer Jacques Cousteau, drowned Thursday after the seaplane he was piloting clipped a sand bank while landing, capsized and sank in the Tagus River, police in this Lisbon suburb said.

Seven persons escaped from the 33-year-old plane but Cousteau drowned at the controls despite rescue efforts by fishermen, police said.

The crew of two Frenchmen and five Portuguese said Cousteau may have hit his head and lost consciousness when the plane flipped over.

Jacques Cousteau was reported en route to Lisbon to claim his son's body and accompany it home to France.

The Second World War craft had been undergoing repairs for several months and was purchased in 1974 by the elder Cousteau to film bird migrations and study river courses.

Philippe Cousteau was a photographer, author and diver who devoted as much passion to flying as his father does to underwater research. When he was 16 he got his glider pilot's licence.

He made his first aqualung dive in the Mediterranean at age four and had dived in every ocean in the world and shared the experience with millions of people as television producer, photographer, and lecturer.

He is survived by his wife Jan and daughter Alexandra.

By JIM ROBB
FP News Service

TOKYO — The leaders of seven industrial nations concluded their two-day economic summit here Friday with a stern declaration calling for reduced oil imports from now to 1985 coupled with strong condemnation of the OPEC action drastically increasing world oil prices this week.

For Canada, the commitment to restraint means it will reduce its average annual rate of growth of oil consumption to one per cent. Oil consumption is currently increasing at a rate of two per cent a year, a federal official said here Friday.

Imports of oil into Canada currently run at some 180,000 barrels net a day, to be reduced to 150,000 barrels per day in 1980 to meet a commitment made by member countries of the international energy agency to reduce demand by five per cent.

Between 1980 and 1985 imports were projected to climb to 650,000 barrels a day to cope with declining Alberta oil production.

The one-per-cent decrease in the rate of consumption means that Canada will drop its imports by 50,000 barrels a day by 1985.

Prime Minister Joe Clark, echoing remarks by the other leaders, told a press briefing the world would see the Tokyo meeting as an "historic summit."

"Canada enjoys a privileged situation," Clark said, "since Canada has abundant energy resources."

But he warned that the decline in conventional oil production in Alberta between 1980 and 1985 will be "dramatic."

"We have firmly decided to keep our imports as low as possible," he declared, repeating his pledge to make Canada selfsufficient in energy by 1990.

He said his Conservative government "will accelerate conservation measures" and replace oil with other sources of conventional and non-conventional energy.

Clark saida, "I am convinced our countries can deal with the energy problems."

President Jimmy Carter of the United States told the press that the summit participants "spoke out forcefully about the actions of OPEC, in raising world oil prices by some 60 per cent since December."

The latest jump this week moved the base world price for a barrel of oil from $14.55 U.S. to $18, with a high of $23.50 when surcharges and premiums usually demanded by Arab countries are added on. Canada has a domestic price of $13.75, but is committed to moving up to the world level.

Carter said the increase "would have a serious, worldwide influence. It will make for less growth, more unemployment, and endanger economic stability."

The U.S. president said the summit "was the first time a group of world leaders has spoken out forcefully about actions by OPEC," the Arabdominated oil cartel.

Carter said the OPEC action would have an "adverse" effect on developing nations.

Dailies launch 'new look'

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Vancouver's two daily newspapers returned today with a new look designed to attract subscribers and make the papers easier to read.

Though the Sun and Province have been shut down for the past eight months by a labor dispute, work went on behind the scenes to reorganize and redesign the major dailies.

Both papers are switching to a format which features more complete sections devoted to specific interest areas, such as sports, travel, business and entertainment.

The Sun will put much more emphasis on "the soft side of the business" — lifestyles, family and food items — directed at female readers.

The paper will also focus very heavily on entertainment.

The Province plans to have tabloid size pull-out sections on sports, business and entertainment.

After an eight-month absence, the name of the game is to get people to buy the paper again, something they've learned to live without.

The Sun had a press run today of 300,000 and contained an eight-page section recapping events that took place during the labor dispute.

Refugees fight way in

HONG KONG (UPI) — Hundreds of Vietnamese "boat people" broke a 20-week sea blockade Friday, battled police with firebombs and rocks and escaped into Hong Kong territory.

Secretary for Security Lewis M. Davies said crewmen on the freighter Skyluck, which carried 2,665 refugees, cut both anchor chains during a storm and let the disabled ship drift to land.

Davies said naval and police boats sped to the scene but were held back "by those on board throwing missiles at the police and their launches.

Davies said "several hundred" refugees jumped overboard and swam ashore. Many fled into the hills of the island before police reinforcements could cordon off the area.

By nightfall, authorities had rounded up or taken off the ship about 2,000 people. They were ferried to a prison converted into a refugee camp, Lewis said.

The dramatic breakaway, in which one 18-year-old girl was injured, came hours before British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington flew to the crown colony from the Tokyo economic summit to examine the refugee situation.

At Cherating in Malaysia, refugee officials Friday disclosed authorities had ordered more than 400 Vietnamese aboard a boat and towed them out into the South China Sea, but brought them back when two died. It was Malaysia's first forcible deportation of refugees who had already landed and been accepted in refugee camps.

Fish plant moratorium

A moratorium on new B.C. fish-processing licences was slapped on today by Environment Minister Rafe Mair.

The move follows complaints from the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, which says the fish-processing industry has been taken over by foreign owners, costing British Columbians hundreds of jobs.

Mair says companies with licences will have them renewed next year but the ministry will also demand the companies provide full financial disclosure.

He also said both the province and the federal government will study the extent and effect of foreign control in the industry.

In Vancouver, union secretary George Hewison said the actions would go partway to meeting the concerns of B.C.'s fishermen.

He said Mair has met three of the four requests the union made.

Hewison said the UFAWU wanted and got the provincial government to put a moratorium on new licences, make full disclosure of foreign control and to ask the federal government for restrictions on exports of unprocessed fish.

Not dealt with, he said, was a union request for actions against processing at sea.

Hewison said he will discuss the remaining issue with Mair at the earliest opportunity.

Today's actions were welcome but possibly too late, Hewison said.

"British Columbia should have acted more than two years ago to stop the foreign takeover of the industry."

In Victoria, a spokesman for Oakland Fisheries Ltd. expressed surprise by the moratorium announcement. However, he would make no immediate comment.

All sports challenged

Hampton Park Hustlers today challenged all other slow-pitch softball teams in the district to try and out-hustle the Hustlers in the sixth annual Great Inner Tube race July 29 in the Gorge.

The Hustlers, who organize the race under the sponsorship of the Victoria Times, in fact, are challenging teams in all other sports.

"We wonder, for example, how the Cougars (Junior hockey team) would do in a summer sport," said Hustlers spokesman Bob Painton.

"I hope the Cougars have the courage to enter a team — and I hope they're smart enough to take off their skates or they'll puncture their inner tubes."

The Times will publish responses to the challenge and if you're in a challenging mood, hurl one by phoning the Victoria Times at 382-3131 and asking for Al Forrest, co-ordinator of the event for the paper.

The Great Inner Tube race involves two paddlers on an inner tube. The tubes can be obtained from a truck tire shop or junkyard. There are three separate races: two men, two women and mixed pairs.

Entry fee is $5 per tube with all net proceeds going to help amateur sport. All contestants must be 16 or older.

About 800 entries are expected in the race this year. Spectators along the one-kilometre route are expected to number close to 20,000.

Painton said he hopes all sports will be represented in this year's race.

"We would like to see teams from soccer, basketball, football, rugby, hockey, lacrosse, baseball and slow-pitch fastball leagues as well as from police and fire departments.

"We also expect there will be entries from the Vancouver Canucks and the Shamrocks."

There is a parade in connection with the race and marching bands are welcome. Parade entrants may phone Painton at 386-0730.

Patchwork quilting catch on

People are going just a little nutty over patchwork and quilting as a hobby.

And one of the people keeping the craze going is an Edmonton woman, Kathy Faryon, whose weekly column now appears in many Canadian newspapers and draws a tremendous reponse.

In answer to numerous requests from readers who have seen Kathy Faryon's columns elsewhere, the Victoria Times will run it every Friday in the Family section. Appropriately, the column is titled Patchwork and Quilting and it begins today on page 31.

First 'walk' in today

The Times' first Walk of the Week wandered astray Thursday, the first day it was to appear as a regular weekly feature.

But it appears today on page 23 and from here on in, it will be in the Times every Thursday, allowing families and others interested in walking, to get organized and make plans for weekend outings.

'Despicable' to tell of probe

MONTREAL (CP) — MP Marc Lalonde (L—Outremont) said Thursday it was "despicable" of Transport Minister Don Mazankowski to announce publicly that he is looking into pension and severance pay given Mr. Justice Yves Pratte when he resigned as chairman of Air Canada four years ago.

Lalonde's comment, made in an interview, came on the heels of Pratte's announcement that he is resigning for health reasons from the Supreme Court of Canada, to which he was appointed almost two years ago.

"That's no way to proceed," Lalonde, the former federal justice minister, said of Mazankowski's actions.

"If a minister has questions, he should look into them. If he finds something, he makes it public.

"But if he finds nothing he should shut up," Lalonde said.

Air Canada reportedly gave Pratte $200,000 in severance pay and a pension based on 20 years of service, although he headed the airline for only seven years.

Lalonde said generous pensions and severance pay are not unusual for senior officials of large companies.

Jamie Burns, Mazankowski's executive assistant, said in an interview from Ottawa that the transport minister never intended to imply there was impropriety in the airline's dealings with Pratte.

PPWC rejects industry offer

One of B.C.'s two pulp and paper industry unions rejected a contract offer Thursday night.

About 5,500 members of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada (PPWC) voted 72 per cent to reject the industry's latest offer.

But the union's president said his group will take no action until it knows what the forest industry's two other major unions, the International Woodworkers of America (IWA) and the Canadian Paperworkers Union (CPU), are going to do.

"We're not going to act in isolation," Angus McPhee said in an interview Thursday night. "We will temper any decision we make by noting the votes of both the IWA and the CPU."

He said the executive is meeting next Wednesday to discuss future action. The union is legally entitled to strike when the current contract expires Saturday.

McPhee said, however, he could not rule out the possibility of wildcat strikes by workers in the union's nine locals at pulp mills throughout the province.

About 7,500 CPU members took a strike vote this week, and union officials said Thursday night results indicated that the vote in favor of a strike was beyond expectations.

An IWA spokesman said Thursday that about 30,000 coastal forest workers will not vote on the contract until sometime after next Tues-

VGH defies gov't on budget

One of Victoria's two acute care hospitals is set to take on the provincial government over financing and the second is considering similar action.

The move by Victoria General Hospital and the fact Royal Jubilee is also considering a tough stand seems certain to bring a confrontation with the government in the coming year.

The VGH board voted Thursday to spend money at a level which will guarantee the existing level of patient care even if it means the hospital goes in the hole financially.

An RJH spokesman said today the hospital's board decided Thursday to wait a month before making a decision to go the same route.

Union agreements at VGH run out Dec. 31 and the hospital's board has told staff there will be no pay increases or increased fringe benefits from Jan. 1 to the end of the fiscal year on March 31, 1980.

Executive director Jim Fair said today, however, that most collective agreements are not settled for several months down the line.

He said the hospital budget, while able to absorb 1979 wage hikes, cannot cover any more wage increases before the end of the fiscal year.

Finance director Roy Welham said Thursday the hospital will probably be $1 million in the red by the end of the fiscal year.

He said some cost savings could reduce the amount to $700,000 or $800,000 but any wage increases after Jan. 1 could easily raise the deficit to more than $1 million.

The board then approved a 14-item list of various cost-cutting measures.

The list ranged from a tougher stance on employee sick leave that could save $50,000, to making board members stand in line in the cafeteria instead of being served at tables.

The hospital pays for board members' meals when they attend evening meetings. The board was told $2,000 could be saved if they paid for their own meals.

Personnel director Mike O'Brien said the sick leave

TOWN TALK

Pierre Berton, graduate of the class of 1937 at Oak Bay high school and still as brash as ever, gave 1979 grads a parting message with a twist at recognition ceremonies in University Centre Wednesday night.

For those immediately heading out to work, Berton told them "university is no great thing anyway." Just don't stop learning — keep reading. "You'll be happier for it."

For the academically-minded, he said: "Marks are no big deal. They may get you through or your foot in the door of a job but a year later no one's going to ask you what your marks were.

"I found that the people who studied all the time were often failures in society. The most important thing is what goes on outside the class." If you have a choice between a high-paying job and doing something you like, "for heaven's sake take the job you like. In the end you'll do better at it."

At University of B.C. he had taken math and sciences intending to be a chemist. even though it was working for the Ubyssey student newspaper that he enjoyed. He scraped through before realizing he didn't want to be a chemist at all, and opted for writing.

Before being hired by Maclean's magazine, its editor — a friend of Berton's history professor — telephoned the prof, who said Berton "would have been a great scholar if he hadn't spent so much time working for that g-------- college newspaper."

"Just the kind of man we're looking for. I'll hire him tomorrow," the editor said.

"Thus endeth the first lesson," Berton said, and sat down to rousing applause from a sea of grinning graduates.

Quick now, how much would you think talk-show host Merv Griffin earns in a year? Half a million? More?

MERV
. . . free holiday

A guy in his income bracket, you might think, could well afford any luxurious holiday that catches his fancy.

Wrong, friends, dead wrong. B.C.'s tourism minister Don Phillips clearly knows something about Merv's true poverty-stricken state the rest of us don't know, because with Christian generosity he has offered the TV star a free holiday here.

According to a press release from the minister's office, Griffin "has been invited to vacation in B.C. as a guest of Tourism B.C."

We're told that in his letter extending the invitation, Phillips noted that on June 20 more than 100,000 British Columbians watched "with obvious joy and pride movie star Angie Dickinson rave about the super natural beauty of British Columbia on your show."

Pressing Merv to taste these pleasures for himself, Phillips' letter added: "British Columbians want to ensure that you personally experience and enjoy the many delights that our province has to offer, which your guest, the charming Angie Dickinson, talked about so glowingly."

Of course we do, Mr. Minister. Why, the first thought that struck us as we watched that show was: We just gotta invite ol' Merv up here so he can see for himself what Angie's raving about.

And anyway, the guy needs a decent holiday.

A four-man Japanese television crew arrived in B.C. Wednesday to start shooting two documentary films, one dealing with the forest industry and the other with the 50th anniversary of the establishment of Canadian-Japanese diplomatic relations.

The forestry program will cover timber inventory, reforestation, firefighting, research, logging and pulp and paper operations. Most of the footage will be shot on Vancouver Island.

Premier Bill Bennett's press secretary John Arnett is ending his three-year association with the premier's office to go into private consulting work.

Arnett, a civil servant, was frequently criticized for getting involved in political situations and for his over-protection of the premier.

The job is to be the liaison between the press and the premier, but many newsmen thought Arnett played guard-dog rather than communicator.

Arnett drew lots of heat from the newsmen who cover the legislature but the former Vancouver Sun reporter denies pressure or criticism led to his resignation from the $30,000-a-year job.

Three years is enough, he said. And a good opportunity in private industry presented itself.

Arthur, former special assistant to Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, had some rather hot and heavy go-rounds with media types during his stormy career on the inside of the Victoria political scene.

Weeks left government employ and was hired by Sterling Newspapers Ltd. as a consultant.

He's now, according to a news release announcing that the company's Peace River Block News is going daily this September, vice-president and general manager of Sterling.

Nice for Arthur, who is now in a position to oversee a sizeable number of the ink-stained wretches he once battled so merrily.

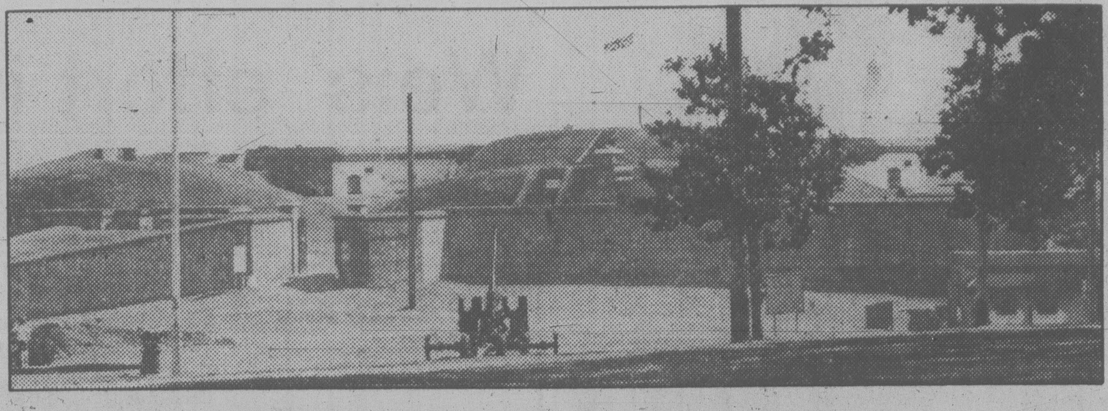
Walk of the Week

Take a stroll back into history

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff



A pleasant walk with a difference — actually a step into history — combined with a study of natural history is within easy reach of Victorians.

The place is Fort Rodd Hill Park in Colwood. Along with a stroll to adjacent Esquimalt Lagoon, teeming with birdlife and shore plants, it makes for an interesting and scenic outing.

Fort Rodd Hill, now a 200-acre national historic park, was named after First Lieutent John Rodd, who served HMS Fisgard during the 1847 Royal Navy survey of Esquimalt harbor.

Designed by Royal Engineers and built and completed by Chinese labor around 1898, the fort was built because of a growing concern in England about Russian and German expansion policies at the turn of the century.

Once it bustled with Royal Marines, and in the First and Second World Wars with Canadian servicemen. It was declared obsolete in the 1950s.

Since it became a park, many of the artifacts and guns have been restored, but a disappearing gun manufactured at the turn of the century is still missing and hopefully will be replaced some day.

One of the things to look for is the red brick dwelling about 100 yards from the fort's entrance. It's a typical warrant officers' married quarters. One of its architectural features is its chimney pots, nearly a dozen, used for fireplaces and ventilation.

Within the fortification, notice the loophole walls, constructed in case of an attack from the rear. The underground magazine and plotting rooms also are fun to explore.

From a vantage point in the fort proper, look at the entire fortified area, and you will get some idea of the skill of royal engineers as landscapers. They built forts not only with an eye for defence but to conform with the surrounding terrain. They saw that minimal damage was done to the environment.

After touring the fortification, walk over to Fisgard Lighthouse, the first to provide light in the Pacific Northwest in 1860.

The second part of the day's outing can include walking or exploring the 120 acres of parkland adjacent and outside the fortified area, or along Esquimalt Lagoon.

Among the plants to watch for are wild onion, St. John's wort, beach pea, wormwood and glasswort. The tall grass is called American dune grass.

There are plenty of picnic areas at the lagoon. Fort Rodd Hill also has a few tables. So why not pack a lunch?

There are several ways to get to the park. The best route is via the Trans-Canada Highway from the city. Turn off at the underpass on to highway 17A for Colwood and watch for Fort Rodd Hill signs. Just before you reach Colwood Corner, turn left. The road will take you to the park.

GOOD OLD R & R (rest and recreation) comes in various forms. For the fortunate and well-heeled, it's a cruise to faraway places on vessels like the Fairsea. For fish packers at Ogden Point, it's time out for a smoke or a sandwich on the quayside, their backs turned to the symbol of opulence nearby.

Swimming approved at Beaver

Beaver Lake is now safe for swimming again but the mystery remains: Who or what polluted it?

Regional health officer Dr. Allan Arneil said Thursday the cause of recent contamination is somewhat puzzling because there is no residential development around Beaver Lake and in mid-May, when the fecal coliform count showed an increase, there was no significant rainfall to produce runoff from adjoining lands.

Provincial government standards require posting of signs in areas averaging 200 or more colonies per 100 millilitres.

After Beaver Lake passed the 200 mark signs warning swimmers were posted on the public beach, but they were removed when subsequent testing showed a return to cleaner conditions.

Another recently posted area, Langford's Glen Lake, has also been given clearance. But Prospect Lake, although showing a declining count, is still considered unfit for swimming, Arneil said.

He said the water testing by inspectors continues on a weekly basis but to date no explanation has been found for the high coliform counts a few weeks ago.

Even in the case of lakes that have homes around them, he said, "one should not jump to the conclusion that it is from human sewage. If that were the cause one wonders why the level should tail off instead of remaining constant."

Arneil said he wonders if the higher count might be caused by climatic conditions, for example a sudden rise in temperature resulting in a "turnover" effect with colder water rising to the surface.

Another question to be considered is the possible influence of natural phenomena such as an increase in the duck population.

Arneil said he would be interested to hear from local residents or groups who might have observed anything unusual about that time.

He said lake pollution has been more pronounced this year than in 1978. This is a matter for concern, both because lakes are more heavily used for recreational purposes and because bacteria live longer in fresh water than in the sea.

However, he stressed that the problem isn't widespread. Of 20 lakes tested, 13 had a low count of less than 10 and only two were above the 80 mark.

Rehiring guarantee denied by St. Joseph's chairman

She also denied the existence of a serious morale problem caused by board interference in school operation.

She said the board has not received a vote of no confidence from school staff or official complaints from parents.

Heaton resigned Wednesday because the board did not renew the contracts of two teachers.

All of the teachers have signed a vote of no confidence in the board and several have indicated they will not stay at the school after next year, he said.

Parents association president Whelda Steeves said Thursday parents are upset about the resignation and feel the board has taken on "supreme power."

She said an internal power struggle is harming school spirit.

Hudson said the board did not have morale problems before Heaton took over as principal in September.

She said the board has always confined itself to finances and general policy-making and had never interfered in the day-to-day running of the school.

"But if we see something wrong we must stop it."

She wouldn't elaborate.

Heaton has asked Roman Catholic Bishop Remi De Roo to examine the powers of parish-elected school boards.

He said the teachers were fired with two days notice after he was assured by former board chairman Henny Voorsluys no teachers were in danger of losing their jobs.

Voorsluys and two other trustees have resigned because they did not agree with the board's actions, according to Heaton.

But Hudson said they resigned for personal reasons unrelated to any disagreement over hiring practices.

Voorsluy resigned because he felt the board needed a stronger leader, she said.

Heaton has blamed the school's problems on flaws in the structure of the Catholic independent school system that allows trustees too much absolute control.

He is asking Bishop De Roo to appoint a superintendent of schools to oversee the operations, or establish a set of guidelines school boards must follow.

Victoria should have one Catholic school board administering the whole district instead of a series of local parish-elected boards that find it difficult to be objective.

Heaton said he will probably send his recommendations to Joe Phillipson, co-ordinator of independent schools for the education ministry.

Hudson said Thursday the charges are nonsense.

Bishop De Roo, parish priest Rev. Bernard Hanley and Voorsluys could not be reached for comment.

By JIM ROBB
FP News Service

TOKYO — The leaders of seven industrial nations concluded their two-day economic summit here Friday with a stern declaration calling for reduced oil imports from now to 1985 coupled with strong condemnation of the OPEC action drastically increasing world oil prices this week.

For Canada, the commitment to restraint means it will reduce its average annual rate of growth of oil consumption to one per cent. Oil consumption is currently increasing at a rate of two per cent a year, a federal official said here Friday.

Imports of oil into Canada currently run at some 180,000 barrels net a day, to be reduced to 150,000 barrels per day in 1980 to meet a commitment made by member countries of the international energy agency to reduce demand by five per cent.

Between 1980 and 1985 imports were projected to climb to 650,000 barrels a day to cope with declining Alberta oil production.

The one-per-cent decrease in the rate of consumption means that Canada will drop its imports by 50,000 barrels a day by 1985.

Prime Minister Joe Clark, echoing remarks by the other leaders, told a press briefing the world would see the Tokyo meeting as an "historic summit."

"Canada enjoys a privileged situation," Clark said, "since Canada has abundant energy resources."

But he warned that the decline in conventional oil production in Alberta between 1980 and 1985 will be "dramatic."

"We have firmly decided to keep our imports as low as possible," he declared, repeating his pledge to make Canada selfsufficient in energy by 1990.

He said his Conservative government "will accelerate conservation measures" and replace oil with other sources of conventional and non-conventional energy.

Clark saida, "I am convinced our countries can deal with the energy problems."

President Jimmy Carter of the United States told the press that the summit participants "spoke out forcefully about the actions of OPEC, in raising world oil prices by some 60 per cent since December."

The latest jump this week moved the base world price for a barrel of oil from $14.55 U.S. to $18, with a high of $23.50 when surcharges and premiums usually demanded by Arab countries are added on. Canada has a domestic price of $13.75, but is committed to moving up to the world level.

Carter said the increase "would have a serious, worldwide influence. It will make for less growth, more unemployment, and endanger economic stability."

The U.S. president said the summit "was the first time a group of world leaders has spoken out forcefully about actions by OPEC," the Arabdominated oil cartel.

Carter said the OPEC action would have an "adverse" effect on developing nations.

Dailies launch 'new look'

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Vancouver's two daily newspapers returned today with a new look designed to attract subscribers and make the papers easier to read.

Though the Sun and Province have been shut down for the past eight months by a labor dispute, work went on behind the scenes to reorganize and redesign the major dailies.

Both papers are switching to a format which features more complete sections devoted to specific interest areas, such as sports, travel, business and entertainment.

The Sun will put much more emphasis on "the soft side of the business" — lifestyles, family and food items — directed at female readers.

The paper will also focus very heavily on entertainment.

The Province plans to have tabloid size pull-out sections on sports, business and entertainment.

After an eight-month absence, the name of the game is to get people to buy the paper again, something they've learned to live without.

The Sun had a press run today of 300,000 and contained an eight-page section recapping events that took place during the labor dispute.

Refugees fight way in

HONG KONG (UPI) — Hundreds of Vietnamese "boat people" broke a 20-week sea blockade Friday, battled police with firebombs and rocks and escaped into Hong Kong territory.

Secretary for Security Lewis M. Davies said crewmen on the freighter Skyluck, which carried 2,665 refugees, cut both anchor chains during a storm and let the disabled ship drift to land.

Davies said naval and police boats sped to the scene but were held back "by those on board throwing missiles at the police and their launches."

Davies said "several hundred" refugees jumped overboard and swam ashore. Many fled into the hills of the island before police reinforcements could cordon off the area.

By nightfall, authorities had rounded up or taken off the ship about 2,000 people. They were ferried to a prison converted into a refugee camp, Lewis said.

The dramatic breakaway, in which one 18-year-old girl was injured, came hours before British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington flew to the crown colony from the Tokyo economic summit to examine the refugee situation.

At Cherating in Malaysia, refugee officials Friday disclosed authorities had ordered more than 400 Vietnamese aboard a boat and towed them out into the South China Sea, but brought them back when two died. It was Malaysia's first forcible deportation of refugees who had already landed and been accepted in refugee camps.

'Despicable' to tell of probe

MONTREAL (CP) — MP Marc Lalonde (L—Outremont) said Thursday it was "despicable" of Transport Minister Don Mazankowski to announce publicly that he is looking into pension and severance pay given Mr. Justice Yves Pratte when he resigned as chairman of Air Canada four years ago.

Lalonde's comment, made in an interview, came on the heels of Pratte's announcement that he is resigning for health reasons from the Supreme Court of Canada, to which he was appointed almost two years ago.

"That's no way to proceed," Lalonde, the former federal justice minister, said of Mazankowski's actions.

"If a minister has questions, he should look into them. If he finds something, he makes it public.

"But if he finds nothing he should shut up," Lalonde said.

Air Canada reportedly gave Pratte $200,000 in severance pay and a pension based on 20 years of service, although he headed the airline for only seven years.

Lalonde said generous pensions and severance pay are not unusual for senior officials of large companies.

Jamie Burns, Mazankowski's executive assistant, said in an interview from Ottawa that the transport minister never intended to imply there was impropriety in the airline's dealings with Pratte.

Fish plant moratorium

A moratorium on new B.C. fish-processing licences was slapped on today by Environment Minister Rafe Mair.

The move follows complaints from the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, which says the fish-processing industry has been taken over by foreign owners, costing British Columbians hundreds of jobs.

Mair says companies with licences will have them renewed next year but the ministry will also demand the companies provide full financial disclosure.

He also said both the province and the federal government will study the extent and effect of foreign control in the industry.

In Vancouver, union secretary George Hewison said the actions would go partway to meeting the concerns of B.C.'s fishermen.

He said Mair has met three of the four requests the union made.

Hewison said the UFAWU wanted and got the provincial government to put a moratorium on new licences, make full disclosure of foreign control and to ask the federal government for restrictions on exports of unprocessed fish.

Not dealt with, he said, was a union request for actions against processing at sea.

Hewison said he will discuss the remaining issue with Mair at the earliest opportunity.

Today's actions were welcome but possibly too late, Hewison said.

"British Columbia should have acted more than two years ago to stop the foreign takeover of the industry."

In Victoria, a spokesman for Oakland Fisheries Ltd. expressed surprise by the moratorium announcement. However, he would make no immediate comment.

All sports challenged

Hampton Park Hustlers today challenged all other slow-pitch softball teams in the district to try and out-hustle the Hustlers in the sixth annual Great Inner Tube race July 29 in the Gorge.

The Hustlers, who organize the race under the sponsorship of the Victoria Times, in fact, are challenging teams in all other sports.

"We wonder, for example, how the Cougars (Junior hockey team) would do in a summer sport," said Hustlers spokesman Bob Painton.

"I hope the Cougars have the courage to enter a team — and I hope they're smart enough to take off their skates or they'll puncture their inner tubes."

The Times will publish responses to the challenge and if you're in a challenging mood, hurl one by phoning the Victoria Times at 382-3131 and asking for Al Forrest, co-ordinator of the event for the paper.

The Great Inner Tube race involves two paddlers on an inner tube. The tubes can be obtained from a truck tire shop or junkyard. There are three separate races: two men, two women and mixed pairs.

Entry fee is $5 per tube with all net proceeds going to help amateur sport. All contestants must be 16 or older.

About 800 entries are expected in the race this year. Spectators along the one-kilometre route are expected to number close to 20,000.

Painton said he hopes all sports will be represented in this year's race.

"We would like to see teams from soccer, basketball, football, rugby, hockey, lacrosse, baseball and slow-pitch fastball leagues as well as from police and fire departments.

"We also expect there will be entries from the Vancouver Canucks and the Shamrocks."

There is a parade in connection with the race and marching bands are welcome. Parade entrants may phone Painton at 386-0730.

PPWC rejects industry offer

About 5,500 members of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada (PPWC) voted 72 per cent to reject the industry's latest offer.

But the union's president said his group will take no action until it knows what the forest industry's two other major unions, the International Woodworkers of America (IWA) and the Canadian Paperworkers Union (CPU), are going to do.

"We're not going to act in isolation," Angus McPhee said in an interview Thursday night. "We will temper any decision we make by noting the votes of both the IWA and the CPU."

He said the executive is meeting next Wednesday to discuss future action. The union is legally entitled to strike when the current contract expires Saturday.

McPhee said, however, he could not rule out the possibility of wildcat strikes by workers in the union's nine locals at pulp mills throughout the province.

About 7,500 CPU members took a strike vote this week, and union officials said Thursday night results indicated that the vote in favor of a strike was beyond expectations.

An IWA spokesman said Thursday that about 30,000 coastal forest workers will not vote on the contract until sometime after next Tues-

One of Victoria's two acute care hospitals is set to take on the provincial government over financing and the second is considering similar action.

The move by Victoria General Hospital and the fact Royal Jubilee is also considering a tough stand seems certain to bring a confrontation with the government in the coming year.

The VGH board voted Thursday to spend money at a level which will guarantee the existing level of patient care even if it means the hospital goes in the hole financially.

An RJH spokesman said today the hospital's board decided Thursday to wait a month before making a decision to go the same route.

Union agreements at VGH run out Dec. 31 and the hospital's board has told staff there will be no pay increases or increased fringe benefits from Jan. 1 to the end of the fiscal year on March 31, 1980.

Executive director Jim Fair said today, however, that most collective agreements are not settled for several months down the line.

He said the hospital budget, while able to absorb 1979 wage hikes, cannot cover any more wage increases before the end of the fiscal year.

He said some cost savings could reduce the amount to $700,000 or $800,000 but any wage increases after Jan. 1 could easily raise the deficit to more than $1 million.

The board then approved a 14-item list of various cost-cutting measures.

The list ranged from a tougher stance on employee sick leave that could save $50,000, to making board members stand in line in the cafeteria instead of being served at tables.

The hospital pays for board members' meals when they attend evening meetings. The board was told $2-000 could be saved if they paid for their own meals.

Personnel director Mike O'Brien said the sick leave

Today's Markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market rose moderately in active mid-afternoon trading today.

Trading was halted at the opening in shares of Canadian Superior Oil Ltd. for dissemination of news that its majority shareholder, Superior Oil Co., has made an offer to buy all remaining outstanding shares. The stock last traded at $143.

Trading in shares of Maplex Management and Holdings Ltd. was halted at the opening at the company's request pending an announcement. The stock last traded at $11½.

Trading resumed at the opening in shares of Dundee Palliser Resources Inc., following a halt Thursday. The company said it will close its Athabasca foundry division in Saskatoon. The stock fell one cent to 49 cents by 2 p.m.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said new common shares of Logistec Corp. will be posted for trading without par value at the opening next Thursday, replacing the currently listed class A and B convertible common shares. The change was effective by law on May 24.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly on an unconfirmed report that Libya had threatened to cut off its oil exports.

Col. Moammar Khadafy of Libya was quoted by a Paris-based Arabic weekly publication as having said last Monday that he plans to shut off oil exports for at least two years.

Libya, one of the most militant members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, accounts for about 10 per cent of the oil imported by the United States.

There was no confirmation of the story, however, and several oil companies which deal with Libya said they had no indication that it was true.

The NYSE's composite index slipped .03 to 58.30.

London

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 473.4, up 4.2.

Industrials and golds declined while banks were mixed.

—VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were up in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

The heaviest action was on the curb exchange where Pony Explorations dipped .35 to .80 on a turnover of 113,000 shares. Neptune Resources gained a nickel to .81 on 101,832 shares and Nortek Engines added .12 to $1.20 on 51,050 shares.

Sing-along Fun for Canada's 112th Birthday

Juliette and Pat Rose will host Canada Sings, a gala national sing-along to be staged by CBC-Television Saturday, June 30, at 5 p.m. live from the Empire Stadium in Vancouver.

To the music of Doug Parker and his 100-piece orchestra, an audience expected to top 30,000, and viewers from coast-to-coast can join in the fun with guest entertainers leading the singing of Canada's favorite songs.

Hosts and song leaders Juliette and Pat Rose will be joining special guests Leon Bibb, Charlene Brandolini, Eleanor Collins, Roma Hearn of Anne of Green Gables, and Lance Harrison with Barnie Potts well-known to Canadian audiences for their roles in Some Of Those Days a show that ran for many years on CBC Television.

Canada's 112th birthday will be celebrated in grand style and with lots of fun on this special, live program. Chris Paton, producer-director of Canada Sings, said, "we expect people, both in the stadium and in the audience at home, to really have a lot of fun. There will be songs that appeal to everyone, from nostalgic to contemporary. We are busy preparing thousands of song books for the live audience, but people at home will be able to follow the songs as the words will appear in print at the bottom of their television screens."

THE SHOW ON THE HILL — On July 1 CBC Television presents a party for Canada's 112th birthday with more than 400 performers joining in celebration during the two-hour live telecast from Parliament Hill. Among the galaxy of talented Canadians gathered to pay tribute to their country and perform for the expected live audience of 30,000, as well as millions more at home, are: Canada's Queen of Country Music Carroll Baker (left); Patsy Gallant, one of the hottest performers in the country today; and CBC's own King of Kensington Al Waxman. They will be joined by hundreds more on Parliament Hill.

THE QUEEN'S PLATE TRULY ROYAL EVENT

CBC Television will bring Canadians the pomp, pageantry and thrills of the 120th running of The Queen's Plate from Toronto's Woodbine Racetrack on SPORTSWEEKEND — Saturday, June 30 at 1 p.m.

Her Majesty, Queen Mother Elizabeth, will be at Woodbine to present the winning owner with the traditional gift of 50 gold sovereigns and the gold cup. The Queen Mother last visited Woodbine for the 115th running of the race in 1974.

Three-year-olds, foaled in Canada, compete at a distance of one mile and one quarter for a purse of $100,000-added in this highlight event of the Royal Week of Racing at Woodbine.

Last year, E. P. Taylor's Regal Embrace gamely held off the challenge of Overskate to win the Plate. This year, Taylor's colt Bold Agent is the early favorite.

Don Whittman will join Michael Magee to describe events at the 120th running of The Queen's Plate. Track announcer Daryl Wells will call the race. Wilf Fielding is Producer of SPORTSWEEKEND's racing coverage. Direction is by Larry Brown.

CLUES ACROSS

1. BURGLARY not burglars. Generally, householders are directly concerned with acts of BURGLARY, rather than with burglars as persons.
6. MILLION not billion. MILLION is the more realistic answer, since it is possible to win a MILLION dollars. In any case, it is doubtful if the girl's mind could encompass what a billion dollars would mean.
7. JAM not ram. Since to ram implies very excessive violence anyway, the clue's phrase "with unnecessary violence" is required more for JAM.
12. MAD not bad or sad. Since villains in general are thoroughly bad, the idea of delving into the history of old-fashioned melodrama and the like in order to find a good number of very bad/MAD villains links up more convincingly with MAD. "Sad" links up less aptly with the idea of villainy.
13. BEAR not hear. If you can't hear the jokes in the first place, you can hardly be said not to laugh at them.
16. FEEL not peel. "From personal experience," rather, you may know "how" one is apt to FEEL after excessive exposure to the sun. Anybody can see that burnt people are liable to peel.
17. BEET not feet. A damaged BEET "might be expected" to bleed (exude its juice) if one happened to know or think such a thing to be likely. The feet are definitely known to bleed when cut, etc.
19. GAL not pal. A girl or woman called "a wonderful GAL" is thereby highly complimented as a wonderful person in an absolute sense. In itself, however, the phrase "a wonderful pal" relates specifically to the person's friendship towards the individual who says it; it just isn't the sort of thing one says as an open compliment to a person's good qualities, etc.
21. MOST not lost. Lost children have an obvious claim on adult help and sympathy; it isn't so much that they are "able to get" it "in one way or another," as MOST children can do when they need.

CLUES DOWN

4. NAMED not famed. There seems little doubt that the swift is so NAMED because it is swift. However, the idea of being famed may be thought unsuitably to reflect an element of glory or celebrity which a bird cannot really have.
5. PALATE not palace. PALATE is more directly apt, since the palace itself is not concerned with food.
9. VACATION not vocation. As distinct from a job or position, a vocation is a calling one follows, rather than something more or less good that one "gets" as a sort of bestowal or benefit in the manner suggested.
10. TITTERED not tottered. A person who tottered might well receive sympathy or concern, rather than merely odd looks. Also, the clue's phrase "for no apparent reason" is required more for TITTERED.
11. GATE not date. The clue's apparent thinking in terms of the previous one requiring to be changed for a better one, favord GATE. A date may well be changed as a matter of convenience or of necessity (rather than because, as a date, it wasn't good enough).
14. PLAITED not planted. The clue's concern with care for neatness suits PLAITED better; one may well plant things carefully to help them grow well, or perhaps so that they will look natural rather than neatly regular.
18. TOOL not fool. A dupe may have been "merely a TOOL," i.e., no more than a cat's paw. If he is a fool, however, it's not really a question of his having figured in the case "merely" as a fool, as if being a fool was some sort of minor function.
20. ALE not age. The mellowness of age is no mere "feeling."

SOAP OPERA SCENE

Jackie rolling with her role

By JOHN GOUDAS

JACKIE ZEMAN-KAUFMAN has learned how to back-off in her character of Bobbi Spencer in General Hospital. Anna Maria Horsford joined "Guiding Light" as Clara Jones.

Did you know there are soap opera schools in New York and Los Angeles?

Jackie Zeman-Kaufman who plays selfish Bobbi Spencer on General Hospital attended one. Jackie remembers taking old soap scripts home, learning lines, rehearsing with a friend, then performing in class in front of two cameras. Criticism was followed by a second try, which hopefully showed signs of improvement.

Whether the former dancer, Playboy-bunny and premed student learned much about the craft this way is questionable, but Jackie landed an agent shortly afterwards, and almost had a job on Ryan's Hope, her very first interview for a soap. Another girl won out, but Jackie soon found a home on One Life to Live in the role of Lana McClain. However, Lana became so neurotic over a two-year run, she had to be written out of the show.

Said Jackie, "I didn't have any acting technique on One Life to Live. Everything I did was instinctive. So the role, rather than just being a part, took over. When Lana got pregnant, I was getting morning sickness. And I've never been pregnant. I was depressed and unhappy. I was allowing a lot of negative energy into my life. It was very difficult. I loved that job, but Nat Polen (Dr. James Craig) sat me down one day and said to me; "Look, I've got to give you some advice. You're doing good work, but you're not going to be good for anything unless you learn that you give what you choose to give, not what everybody is going to take from you." He was right. I've learned to remain myself while the character stays the character."

Therefore, fans shouldn't get the strange idea that cruel Bobbi Spencer on General Hospital is anything like actress Jackie Zeman-Kaufman. Although Bobbi will try every conceivable ploy to lure Scotty Baldwin to her clutches, Jackie isn't a conniving female in the least.

If viewers still think so, it can only be a tribute to Jackie's skills as an actress.

CHANNEL CHATTER. Guiding Light has a new character named Clara Jones, who is Holly's cellmate. The talented actress Anna Maria Horsford, who recently scored in a supporting role in the ABC Theater presentation, Hollow Image, also had a small role in The Doctors, and, sometime back, appeared on Broadway in For Colored Girls. Anna Maria should sparkle the proceedings as Clara.

After more than seven years, the Phil-Tara love story has run its course on All My Children. Last week saw the couple move to Washington, D.C. Nancy Fragnione and Nick Benedict (Tara and Phil) made their exits from the series. Insiders say that Nancy was planning to leave anyway but Nick is still in a state of shock, considering his recent Emmy nomination.

Maureen Nooney (Ann Jeffers in Guiding Light) and her photographer-husband Roger Pellegrine are renovating an old ribbon factory where they live, just outside of New York City. The are enjoying the project, but it is proving to be a tremendous amount of work.

Soap stars are often mistaken for the characters they play, but sometimes the actors fall into the same trap. Gary Giem (Dr. Paul Graham on Love of Life recalls an occasion when costume designer Bob Anton mentioned that he wasn't feeling well. Gary shocked everyone when he immediately replied, "I'll see what I can do." Anton reminded him that he was not really Dr. Paul Graham.

Ryan's Hope fans in the Rhode Island-Massachusetts area should be alerted to the fact that Nikki Goulet (Mary Ryan) and Michael Levin (Jack Fenelli) will be at Lincoln Park in Rhode Island for another big Soaps Alive! presentation, on July 15. Mark your calendars.

Tudi Wiggins (Meg Hart in Love of Life) is busy with organic gardening, both in her New York City dwelling and, on a larger scale, at her upstate N.Y. country home. She serves the healthiest and most delicious salads within a 150-mile radius.

Eileen Fulton, the much married Lisa Coleman on As the World Turns, is travelling a bumpy marital road in real life. She and her business manager husband Danny Fortunato are "acting silly".

PLOT PORTENTS: With Laura off the deep end, Marlena shoulders the psychiatric responsibilities on Days of Our Lives. But is she the right person to help Laura? Marlena must also watch young Donna carefully, a young lady who has been unusually even-tempered of late. The writers should remedy that interlude shortly. Julie appears to be in better shape mentally, and Margo, though worried stiff over Mike's money problems, hasn't suffered a remission.

Dr. Casey Reed sorts out her sexual fears on The Young and the Restless, realizing she was molested as a child. At least sister Nikki is finally beginning to support Casey, but her concentration span is so limited. Meanwhile Derek may still be married to Kay, but he comes to life when Jill drops by. Even Suzanne, his ex-wife acknowledges that Jill has the inside track.

Dave Feldman has a stroke when he finds out about Pat and Nancy's living arrangement on Ryan's Hope. He finds out courtesy of Delia, who is once again showing her true colors. Seneca and Jill are chin-to-chin about his control of her, but will Seneca give in? Jack and Siobhan try to cope with their feelings for each other as Joe Novak enters their lives.

Phoebe puts a halt to the blossoming Paul-Ellen romance on All My Children. Ruth returns to Pine Valley with little Charlie along for a visit and Tad reacts badly to news of her pregnancy. Link continues to pursue Kelly and Sybil stays hot on the trail of Dr. Cliff Warner. Edna scores and Erica gets her way again!

Joe and Vicki try to put a stop to Tina's involvement with Mario on One Life to Live. Conflicting reports are coming from San Carlos as Brad tries to cover Adam's as well as his own deceptions. Ed is finding it difficult adjusting to his newly found bachelorhood. Also, Mick Gordon arrives and Esther Snow shows up with an unsettling pronouncement.

Looking at stars

That middle initial is "G" for Gleason. Yes, she's Jackie's daughter.

Young Joanna Gleason, on the other hand, is no relation to Jackie and Linda G. Joanna didn't want to trade on the name of her dad, Monty Hall, so she opted for her married name instead, not realizing the explaining she'd have to do in every interview.

TV MAILBAG

OLD TUG — Several years ago there was a television program that starred Preston Foster and a tug boat named Cheryl Ann. None of my family or friends can not think of the name of the program. Can you possible find out? — Mrs. H. E. Ingram, Fellows, Calif.

"Waterfront" first aired in 1954, which is a bit longer than a few years ago, but perhaps you caught it in syndication.

YES AND NO — Will you please tell me if the two young boys — Matthew Laborteaux and Patrick Laborteaux — that play on "Little House on the Prairie" are brothers? I love them both. — Ruth Reddith, Long Beach, Miss.

They are, and they aren't brothers, depending on how literal you want to be. Both were adopted as young children by the Laborteauxs, but were born to different biological parents.

SON CHILD — Was the little boy that played the part of Raun or "Son-Rise" an autistic child? — Louise Wyble, Mesa, Ariz.

SAVAGE — I was very impressed with the performance of John Savage in "The Dear Hunter". I seem to recall him starring in a brief TV series about a young reporter. Can you help me on this one? — Lucy Conner, Neptune, N.Y.

Savage played cub reporter Jim Molloy in NBC's "Gibbsville," which lasted from November through December of 1976. The stories were developed from the work of John O'Hara, and Gig Young played senior reporter Ray Whitehead.

MONKEE SEE — Did The Monkees ever win an Emmy? A friend of mine says they did, but I don't see how since the show didn't last all that long. Also, how many Emmies did Bill Cosby win for "I Spy"? — Daphne Bridger, Hickory, N.C.

The group didn't win an Emmy as performers, but the show was named Best Comedy Series of 1966-67. Cosby also won in '66-'67, and again the next year.

SHORT FOR WHAT? — What's Ricky Nelson's real name? I mean what's the Ricky short for?—D. D. Edwards, Salem, Mass.

How about Eric?

DOUBLE DUTY — I think I have an interesting question for you. I know a number of people have written to you about James Garner's old series "Nichols." But I have a more picky question about it. Did they kill Nichols off in the final episode?—Matt Lancaster, Tulsa, Okla.

Verrry interesting, but not so tough. "Nichols" was a favorite of mine. The way the producers had it figured, the show wasn't wowing them in the ratings because the main character, Nichols (James Garner), was a bit too cowardly and larcenous (it worked in "Maverick"). So they decided to bump him off in the last episode and replace him with his twin brother, Jim Nichols, also played by Garner, but a more stern of jaw hero. The ploy didn't work, and neither Nichols made it into the fall of '72.

REQUIEM — Can you tell me if Wendell Corey, who starred in "The Eleventh Hour," is still alive? I haven't seen him in quite some time. — Mrs. H. Fischer, Des Moines, Iowa.

I'm afraid Corey died in 1968, at the age of 54.

PAPER CHASE — We are faithful watchers of "The Paper Chase" and we are curious as to what college or university campus is used for the campus scenes. Do you know? — P.D. and M.L., Livermore, Calif.

There are a number of beautiful university campuses in the Greater Los Angeles area that could easily serve as the background for "The Paper Chase." However, the series, when filmed on location, uses the campus of the University of Southern California.

COMMERCIAL — There is a commercial for "Miller High Life" making the rounds these days and the voice doing the ad sounds familiar. Who is it? — J.G., Boyce, Va.

The voice belongs to Gene Berry.

By JOHN BOGERT

HOLLYWOOD — Out back, out past the swimming pool and tennis courts that lie behind the Disneyesque mansion, Lyle Waggoner, that almost stereotypical hadsome guy, is painting adoor.

Dressed in zippered suede boots and tailored jeans, the work hardly seems fitting for the lord of this vast manor, but he looks comfortable and pleased nonetheless.

"When I'm doing fine, I'm happy as can be," says the former Carol Burnett sidekick turned "Wonder Woman" sidekick.

"Most actors, having just finished a series would be panicked. They'd have nothing to do except call their agents looking for new parts. Not me. I'm adding a new room on back here. In fact, I'm quite happy to work around here all day long.

"This may sound a bit strange, living in a house like this, but I never cared anything for the fast life. It was always more important for me to secure my family's future financially than to put on a show."

The Tudor-style house is gargantuan, with wooden floored rooms so big, and beamed ceilings so high, he's had to make his own oversized furniture to fill it.

But the fact remains that Waggoner has managed to secure the financial future of his wife Sharon and his two youg sons.

Lyle Waggoner: good investor

In addition to the house, which he says is now in the million dollar plus category, he's managed to invest his money wisely.

His thriving business life includes ultramodern motor homes he rents as dressing rooms to movie studios, condoniniums in Mexico and other real estate developments.

"I'm at a turning point in my life. I've got a lot of acting talent and a lot of physical talent that hasn't been touched on. I want parts that use these talents."

Looking at the man it's easy to see where of he speaks. A muscular 6-foot-4 and 200 pounds, it's obvious that those facial lines and his slightly graying hair will only improve, look more distinguished, with age.

"For the longest time I had no idea what I was doing. I was very serious about making it but, knowing about the business, I was thrilled to take anything that came along. Needless to say, I'm not like that anymore."

He had been a salesman back home in Kansas City when he decided to take all the flattery being heaped on his good looks daily, and come West.

"Every time I showed up at someone's door, or met a new person, they'd ask me why I wasn't in pictures. I listened to it so long I eventually began believing it."

There were hard times, working in mail rooms and the like, but he managed to bring him and his wife through. And from it, they certainly learned how to manage their finances, never losing that sense of tightnss that comes from not having.

"Since neither my wife or I came from wealthy families, the money I was making seemed like a lot. But being wary, we saved, living in an apartment for the longest time until we could afford this place."

That same sort of mid-America attitude that set him up, also keeps him sort of down-home in attitude.

The Brothers Gibb

In their teens, they were a struggling, British band playing Working Men's Clubs and cinemas. Today, in their late twenties, they are the world's biggest record-sellers and money-makers in the history of pop music. They are the brothers Gibb — Barry, Maurice and Robin — better-known as The Bee Gees to millions of their fans. Their unprecedented success story is told in a new series on CBC Radio entitled The Bee Gee's Story, beginning Monday, July 2 at 8:04 p.m. on CBC Radio.

The 13-week British-produced series, written and narrated by American rock expert, Paul Gambaccini, traces the rise of The Bee Gees, covering their early days in Britain, the move to Australia, and their later return to the U.K. to produce their first Number One hit.

The series also covers the group's recording failures and near eclipse in the late Sixties when the brothers broke up to go in separate directions. After reuniting in 1970, The Bee Gees celebrated with an American Number One hit entitled Lonely Days, and eventually with a string of hit singles and top-selling albums including the highly successful movie soundtracks for Saturday Night Fever, Grease and Sergeant Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band, they emerged as the most successful band in recording history. The series concludes with a look at Spirits Having Flown, The Bee Gees latest album.

By Laurence Laurent

Mike Farrell has found the perfect life for an actor. He works six months a year on "M-A-S-H" and spends the rest of the time working for social, political and personal projects. Better yet, he finds he's working on a series that "I love to do. I'm proud of it. I can hold up my head."

Mike Farrell is 6 feet, 3 inches tall and 40 years old. Much has been written about his sensitivity to social issues and his unwillingness to take up unpopular causes. He's read most of what's been written and he has no intention of changing his personally involved lifestyle. Mike Farrell is a man with a grip on reality.

He came up in television the hard way. He started out with a role in the daytime drama ("You mean soap opera," he said) "Days of Our Lives." He stayed with the role of architect Scott Banning for two years, "and I learned a lot about acting."

The 1970-71 season brought a new schedule to CBS and an emphasis on young, urban people doing things that couldn't be done in "Green Acres" or "Petticoat Junction." Mike Farrell was part of the trend, and he latched onto a role in a new series called "The Interns." The new schedule was gone by the end of the year, but Farrell bounced to another short-lived series called "The Man and the City." He was in support of Anthony Quinn, an actor of such dimensions that he needs little support and may be entirely too large for the 21-inch television set. "The Man and the City" lasted one year.

After that, Farrell settled down to a four-year contract at Universal Studios, doing things he didn't like to do and hoping for the day that he would land a role he would be proud to do. That day came when he was asked if he would replace Wayne Rogers and become the second lead, behind Alan Alda, in the "M-A-S-H" series. Line producer Burt Metcalfe had seen Farrell's work and liked it. He had Farrell make a test with Alan Alda, and after others were tested, decided that Mike would be the best.

"M-A-S-H" is a rarity among television programs in that it can lose important, key people and retain its high ratings. It will head into an eighth season in September, having rarely been outside the top 20 and usually in the top 10 in the ratings.

"The characters stay consistent," said Farrell, "because we have a nurturing atmosphere. It started when Gene Reynolds was producing the series. The cast came in, sat around a table and read the script. When the reading was finished, Gene asked everyone to think about his part and to offer suggestions.

"This is unheard of in television," said Mike Farrell. "On most shows they not only don't care what the actors think, they would prefer actors who don't think."

Farrell always has suggestions to offer and, not surprisingly, so does Alan Alda. Alda draws praise from everyone who works with him. Farrell is no different. "My inspiration for directing and writing comes from Alan. He's such a dynamo. It's very easy to say nice things about him."

Farrell says the money is so good that "It's embarrassing. Worse, don't tell anybody, but I'd do it for free."

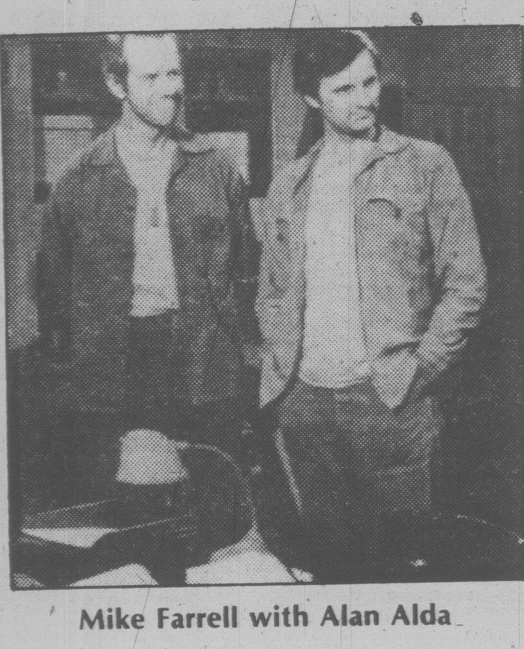
He's not really going to work for free, but he's ready to see "M-A-S-H" change this season. The series has suffered losses that would have been fatal to other programs. It lost Wayne Rogers, who played Trapper John and was replaced by Farrell. McLean Stevenson left for great new opportunities (which have yet to be seen) and was replaced by Harry Morgan. Larry Linville, the suitor to nurse Hot Lips Houlihan and the butt of many of the jokes, went on to greater opportunities (which have yet to be realized) and was replaced by David Ogden Stiers. Now Gary Burghoff, who plays Radar O'Reilly, is leaving.

The series also lost producers Gene Reynolds and Larry Gelbart, and this season it lost the writer-producer team of David Isaacs and Ken Levine. The new writer-producer team is Jim Mulligan and John Rappoport.

Farrell says that the changes actually help, since they provide "new dynamics," and besides, that's more natural for an Army unit than to have people coming and going? The new plans call for an increased emphasis on Cpl. Klinger (James Farr), who will be given added responsibilities. The North Korean spy, who appeared last season, will be back for additional episodes. Nurse Houlihan, who romanced Maj. Frank Burns (already married) and wed Lt. Col. Donald Penobscot (Beeson Carroll) is set for additional romantic involvement.

Mostly, the M-A-S-H unit will continue to be anti-war, while patching up and putting back together wounded soldiers. The human elements that have made the show popular for seven seasons will carry it just about as long as Alan Alda and Mike Farrell want to continue with the series.

Already, it has received the supreme compliment in television — imitation. In the works, and almost at the pilot stage at NBC, is a new series about an Army medical team in the Vietnam War. You couldn't get much closer than that without a plagiarism suit.



Mike Farrell with Alan Alda

By RUTH THOMPSON

Tom Laughlin, whom I caught up with between planes before he winged off to Italy, grinned as he changed his I-never-give-interviews policy to, "Well, almost never. But this time, I guess I'm glad to."

Why? Because in real life he's as dedicated to routing rascals from power as is his Billy Jack character in the movies. A devout amateur tennis player, Tom is after the shady promoters who have been victimizing pros, celebrities, and the charities that are supposed to benefit from exhibition matches. So, along with Chris Evert Lloyd, Tom is the hard-working co-president of the newly formed, non-profit U.S. Professional Celebrity Tennis Association.

It has both a whammo attention-getter on how to do things right for starters, and then a permanent function as a one-step clearing house where honest folks who want big names for a local charity tennis event can get honest guidance.

What about the whammo?

Starting July 9, it's a week-long tournament on the Lido isle of Venice, Italy, to benefit children through UNICEF. Says Tom, "It shows the components you need: civic cooperation (the Venice Tourist Office), a hotel base (the Excelsior, through Cigahotels), a sponsor (Martini and Rossi)." And — if you're lucky — big name TV coverage. With Merv Griffin, both a fine player and a board member, the new association has it made. Because Merv is skipping Monaco this time around for the First Annual Merv Griffin International Venice Classic. He'll do two programs of highlights on his show.

Actors — also producers, directors, etc. — given free rein at testimonial dinners, or in awards' thank-you speeches, too often lose all sense of timing and along with it a high quota of charisma. The windy ones are certainly not serving their own best interests. And though a few Tony winners griped at being told by producer Alex Cohen to be concise, viewers and critics are still applauding last month's Tony-cast on CBS as the best awards' show ever televised.

Reminiscing about it later Cohen said, "I keep in mind how the people at home feel when one of these things runs way overtime. I get upset myself when I don't get the 11 o'clock news at 11."

Television has never quite done right by spunky Sandy Duncan. Sandy, however, apparently is not bothered one bit. She'll star this summer in a new road show production of "Peter Pan."

Austin City Limits gets swamped with red-hot Louisiana boogie, thanks to ragin' Cajun Doug Kershaw and Zydeco King Clifton Chenier, Friday, July 6, at 11 p.m. on Channel 9.

Doug Kershaw has been sawing away on stage since he was nine years old and his style of fiddle playing appeals to one of the broadest audiences today on the American music scene. He has taken his original French Cajun sound and souped it up over the years to garner a strong rock following coupled with his enthusiastic country fans who can never get enough of his "swamp swing."

Kershaw's Austin City Limits appearance allows him to give a lively cross section of his different musical styles, as he performs Diggy Diggy Low, Mama Go To Know How, Cajun Stripper, and his signature song, Louisiana Man.

Then Louisianan Clifton Chenier squeezes out his pioneered brand of music, called Zydeco, on the accordian. The sound, developed from several strains of music payed by Creole Blacks in Louisiana, is borne mainly out of the blues, but Chenier trumps up the flavor by throwing in a little waltz, rock, Louisiana two-step, and down-home boogie. It is said that the 53-year-old Zydeco King can play for two full days without repeating a song.

Clifton Chenier and his band treat the crowd to Just Like a Woman, No Salt in My Beans, Jodie Blanc, Flip, Flop and Fly, Goin' Home Tomorrow, and Rock House.

Ideal design for narrow lot

Here's a three-bedroom, two-storey home which contains a range of design features guaranteed to satisfy the most exacting tastes. The design is ideally suited to the very narrow urban building lot and would be perfectly adaptable to multiple-dwelling construction. The handsome exterior, finished in mixed vertical and diagonal channel siding, with heavy shake roof and stone veneer chimney, presents a dramatically modern facade which would harmonize well in any residential setting.

The weather-protected entry leads into a spacious entrance foyer and naturally to the right, up two risers to the stlish elevated living room combination. The living room features a convivial masonry fireplace flanked by full-height windows for excellent natural lighting. The dining room is elevated two risers from the living room and separates from the kitchen via convenient pocket door.

The well-planned U-shape kitchen has an excellent work triangle and is centrally-positioned between the dinette and dining room for excellent separation of formal and casual dining, while still providing for ease of serving. A large family room is sunken two risers from the dinette, and has sliding door access to the rear patio.

A large laundry-utility complex is conveniently close to the kitchen, and also contains a generous storage area and a linen folding counter. A two-piece vanity bath with an additional linen storage facility is conveniently central to all downstairs areas of the home.

All three bedrooms are grouped around the central bath and linen storage area. Each has ample closet storage and excellent natural lighting. The large master has a full walk-in closet and a three-piece ensuite with tub.

A full basement, with space for the future development of additional recreational facilities, or bedrooms if required, completes the convenience features of this highly practical and attractive design.

Plans for design No. 78-1825 may be purchased either by the single set, at a cost of $70 for the first set and $10 for each additional set, or by the package. A five-set plan package, including the first set, is only $125.

Whichever method you choose, please include $5 for postage and handling. B.C. residents add 4% sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs Magazine, Series 40, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas, plus 320 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.75 ($2 plus postage and handling).

John Hearn's collectibles

My best advice is don't — at least not without consulting some reliable authority such as the head of the art department of your local university or community college. Glass is etched with hydrofluoric acid. There is an old story about the chemical researcher who went to his chief with the wonderful news that he had just invented the universal solvent. His boss replied, 'and what are you going to keep it in?' They might have been talking about hydrofluoric acid, as mean an industrial chemical as it is possible to conceive and not to be fooled around with.

The method theoretically is simple enough. It is approximately the same as for etching copper plate; the surface is covered with a resistant varnish through which the design is scratched with a sharp instrument. The glass is then immersed in a solution of hydrofluoric acid which eats into the glass along the scratch lines.

In the meantime the fumes from the acid will be busy etching all the rest of the glass in the room including the windows, and if you spill any on your person . . . well don't!

I am always ready to encourage the enthusiastic amateur but this is not one that you should learn by doing.

Glenda Porter of Toronto asks for definition of terms which we all bandy about until someone asks us to define them and so bring us to a dead stop.

The terms are Baroque and Rococo.

I always thought Rococo was like Baroque but on a smaller and more frivolus scale and that it came later. It turns out that my asumptions are fairly accurate but shallow.

Baroque was essentially concerned with the dramatic and the illusory, with vivid colors, hidden light sources, luxurious materials and elaborate contrasting surface textures used to heighten immediacy and sensual delights. The very words are Baroque. They are not mine but lifted verbatin from the Encyclopedia Brittanica in an article which continues in the same heroic vein. Rococo, on the other hand, developed out of Baroque and concerned itself with ornamental frivolity, fanciful tracery, scrollwork and voluptuous non-functional curves.

Does that help?

In these days of wobbly economies, I sometimes wonder what would happen if all trade was conducted along the lines of the antique business where buyers are so anxious to find out the price and sellers are so reluctant to tell them. I was looking through the want ads in CanadiAntiquer, that excellent forum for collecting buffs and found things like this: — Old fountain pens wanted, write condition, price, etc. Old Theatre Programs wanted, send description, price, etc. Coca-cola items wanted, price and description in first letter. In another column were items for sale — three sets of Dionne quintuplet spoons, an antique organ, watchmaker's tools and parts, Doulton jugs, commemorative spons, goblets — and not a price to be seen anywhere. What a mad market!

If you look in the classified section of this newspaper you will find virtually every item priced — how else can the advertiser hope to sell it? But in the antique column there will be the same old reluctance.

I ran into an interesting store up near Goderich where they sell antiques on consignment. The owner refuses to advise on price. You can ask what you like for your merchandise and that is what he will label it. If the price is low it will sell quickly, if it is high it may never sell. That's about the way it is. What everyone wants to know is what is the highest possible price that will sell quickly. Dealers with thirty years experience would also like to know that.

Readers letters should be addressed to Collector's Item, c/o Victoria Press, R.R. #1, Lowbanks, Ontario, N0A 1K0.

Michener's Hawaii

The film version of James A. Michener's epic best-seller, Hawaii, starring Julie Andrews, Max Von Sydow and Richard Harris will be rebroadcast Wednesday, July 4 at 8 p.m. on Channel 7. Carrol O'Connor and Gene Hackman also star in the film, which was released theatrically in 1966 by United Artists and originally broadcast in 1974.

The Rev. Abner Hale (Von Sydow), a missionary, battles for a nation of souls and tries to hold on to the soul of a single woman — his wife, Jerusha (Miss Andrews). Transplanted from their staid and rigid New England home, the Hales risk the dangerous and arduous trip around Cape Horn to settle in and bring the enlightenment of western ways to the lush islands of Hawaii.

Pat Barclay

By now everyone must have heard of Jim Unger. How he got started in the cartoon business when the Mississauga Times, the weekly newspaper for which he was art director, needed an editorial cartoon at the last minute. How he was named "Cartoonist of the Year" for three successive years by the Ontario Weekly Newspaper Association. How friends persuaded him to try to syndicate his work. How the Toronto Star syndicate turned him down, saying, "There's no market for it." How he nearly gave up. How his friends persisted until he sent a handful of cartoons to the Universal Press Syndicate in Mission, Kansas. How Universal Press replied with a 10-year contract and syndication in 20 newspapers.

Today, Jim Unger earns $80,000 a year and his daily cartoon — named simply "Herman" — appears in more than 250 newspapers in seven countries. Until recently Herman cartoons have been available at the rate of one a day to newspaper readers and in modest paperbacks containing around 90 cartoons each. On May 1, however, Jim Unger reached a new milestone with the publication of The 1st Treasury of Herman.

"800 Cartoons! In a Single Book! And Every One of Them Strictly from Unger!" burbles his publisher happily, and no wonder. This book is so funny it's a threat to the health of post-operative patients everywhere. Don't, whatever you do, let it fall into the hands of anyone with stitches, hiccups or whooping cough. I read it in small doses — spasms, I nearly said — at intervals of several hours apart and even so, I was a basket case by the end of the book. (Of course, matters were not helped by my daughter's impending math test. Every now and then she'd call from the kitchen, "Could you laugh a little more quietly, Mom?" and out in the living room, I'd respond, as helpfully as I could, with a close simulation of a terminal case of asthma.)

Analyzing why Herman is so funny isn't easy. Unger, in his too-few words scattered through the Treasury, explains it this way: "If you saw a hippopotamus and everyone around you convinced you it was a racehorse, you'd think it was a pretty ugly racehorse. Taken one step further, if they convinced you it was a French poodle, it would be even uglier. So that's what I draw in Herman. I draw the hippos. They're really quite lovable."

Unger's characters, who all seem to look as if they've been drawn with wax on a very hot day, are superlatively ugly. Big-nosed, dot-eyed, spike-haired and fallen-chinned, they're as much a parody of the ordinary people they represent as their situations are real.

As an experiment, try covering an Unger drawing and reading the caption first. It will probably say something disarmingly innocent like "What are you up to?", "George makes all our own furniture," or "Okay . . . here's the results of your medical." Now try to imagine Unger's illustration. Next, look at his actual drawing. As this little exercise should make clear, it's the distance between Unger's imagination and ours, plus his skill at drawing impossibly ugly people in familiar, everyday situations, that produces the Unger humor.

Favorite Unger settings include the dentist's office, the bathtub, the golf course and the zoo. Favorite Unger props include giant eggs, sharks, wigs and arrows. Yet Unger's talent for the incongruous can produce some unique variations. There's the hole in the wall setting for example, as in "How is it I take a shower every day and do it without stepping on the soap?" or the unpredictable prop ("How many guys d'you know with a solar-powered wristwatch?").

Ingenious as these ideas are, however, they're outshone by the situation jokes at which Unger excels. (Wife saying to husband brushing his teeth: "You're using my athlete's foot ointment.")

The 1st Treasury of Herman contains some straightforward gags ("Sure I'd love a second honeymoon . . . who with?"), and even the odd shaggy dog ("How am I supposed to watch television when he's always wearing my glasses?"). Mostly, however, it's populated by grotesque characters floundering through embarrassing situations that ring the bell of recognition in us all. As Unger says himself, "I never worry about running out of ideas. After all, I've got four billion Hermans working for me every day."

SURVIVING: Autism to Auschwitz

By WALT KELLYTHORNE

Auschwitz and Anne Frank, right, hold lessons for survival, author contends

"My business," Bruno Bettelheim writes, "is not with the dead, but with the living."

The living with whom Bettelheim chooses to work are children — autistic children, specifically — and he has spent the greater part of 40 years attempting and succeeding to retrieve those children from the isolation they have placed themselves in. Bettelheim has written several books — they are all in paperback — about his work with children at the Orthogenic School in Chicago, which is probably why there are few references in this collection of his essays to that aspect of his life. Instead, and further amplifying his work with children, these essays chronicle and comment on survival — yours, mine and our neighbor's.

At first glance these essays might not seem to be pertinent to the lives most of us lead today.

A little over a third of the book, for example, is devoted to essays that detail life in the German concentration camps, and the methods used by the Gestapo to ensure their charges' docility and compliance. An esoteric subject most of us would perhaps rather avoid if we can. But we can't, Bettelheim makes clear. What happened in the camps so many years ago can happen again — or not; it's up to us. And the lessons we learn from the survivors — of whom Bettelheim himself is one — can make all the difference in the world.

"Our obligation," Bettelheim believes, ". . . is to strengthen the life drives, so that never again — if we can help it — will these be so totally destroyed in so many, least of all by the power of a state."

How, then, does one strengthen one's life drives? Bettelheim is not specific about that here, as his other books detail the necessary steps; but he suggests, by examining his own experiences and the experiences of other camp inmates, what must be done.

There seem to be three crucial elements here: self-esteem, integration and criticism.

A person with little sense of self-esteem, Bettelheim found, would rarely survive life in the camps: Accepting on some level the Gestapo's charges of their guilt and worthlessness, it was only a matter of time before they were crushed.

Apart from the Jews, Bettelheim found, it was the middle class which suffered most in the camps. It's members ". . . had no consistent philosophy which could protect their integrity as human beings . . . They had obeyed the law handed down by the ruling classes, without ever questioning its wisdom."

A strong sense of self-esteem, however, often allowed its possessor to withstand every kind of attack — short of physical annihilation — on his or her belief and value system, and was an essential part of their post-camp ability to transcend their horrifying experiences

They were, in other words, able successfully to integrate those experiences into a new (or at least partially new) personality that continued to grow.

And, finally, a sharply honed critical sense is necessary for any survivor. Without that sense one may deny unpleasant aspects of reality to such an extent that one is still protesting one's ignorance even as one steps on to the train for the camps.

". . . the walk to the gas chambers," Bettelheim points out in The Ignored Lesson of Anne Frank, "was only the last consequence of these Jews' inability to comprehend what was in store; it was the final step of surrender to the death instincts, which might also be called the principle of inertia. The first step was taken long before arrival at the death camp."

Thus this essay on Anne Frank is also an essay in victimology — as, really, are many others in this volume — and the lessons we learn here can usefully be applied by all of us in aspects of our life that might seem far removed from the concentration camp world.

That world — or at least the seeds of that world — is still with us, Bettelheim implies.

He's not looking for a conspiracy of madmen, though: As an orthodox Freudian, Bettelheim maintains that the capacity for cruelty and destruction is inherent in each of us. But so, more importantly, are the tendencies to love and to create.

Whether he is writing on Education and the Reality Principle, Mental Health and Urban Design, Alienation and Autonomy or (most brilliantly and critically) on Surviving as discussed in a review of Lina Wertmuller's Seven Beauties, Bruno Bettelheim reveals himself as a survivor who is finely tuned to both aspects of ourselves and our age.

Would that we all could be the same. The world and ourselves deserve such devotion.

Bigburgers at river's bend

'Salim and his shop mark changes that stir Africa'

By ANTHONY JENKINS

The forebears of Salim the narrator of A Bend in the River, came from India to the East Coast of Africa in a time beyond memory. But they still do not belong there: "True Africa was at our back," and, with the imminent break-up of colonial rule, their future appears bleak.

Like all of Naipaul's protagonists, Salim is a man without a country, but he is distinguished from his fellow exiles by his "habit of looking, detaching myself from a familiar scene and trying to consider it as from a distance."

That detachment, added to the native fatalism of his people, makes Salim more sensitive to the changes that must befall his adopted land (Tanzania?), and he determines to counter the inevitable by journeying to the centre of Africa.

There, at a bend in the great river, in the ruins of a former colonial town (Kisangani in Zaire?), he puts together the pieces of what had once been a friend's shop, trading in razor blades, pencils, syringes, enamel bowls: "Not essentials, not luxuries; but things that made ordinary life easier."

Salim's journey to the interior had been horrendous enough, what with the mud, sand drifts, broken roads and "all that haggling in the forest outside wooden huts that flew strange flags." But once in the town, he must cope with alien manners and with the rush of post-colonial history:

"You can always get into those places. What is hard is to get out. That is a private fight. Everybody has to find his own way."

The novel describes Salim's private battle, but in a way that anatomizes the insoluble conflicts in the whole of today's Africa. Where novelists like Conrad or Greene see Africa as a symbolic landscape which highlights the characteristics of their central human figure, Naipaul makes Salim, with his habit of detachment, a window into the complexities of the Third World.

The comparison is not a fortuitous one, for Naipaul's book seems destined to become a classic, a moving and ironic account of human corruption as well as a piercing analysis of contemporary Africa's politics. Naipaul himself once wrote that the finest novels are those which are "distinguishable from truth"; his own book has that truth.

What the novel suggests is that everywhere, but particularly in Africa, little men and big are on the run from the "progress" of history, from greed, from their own fears. One cannot turn back to the past; one can only submit or, like some of the Africans, remove oneself in a trance-like resignation to an other-world where the ancestors scream their anger.

The only thing that persists is the earth itself. The suburb near the rapids had once been forest, an Arab settlement, a colonial outpost; it is now a ruin, reclaimed by the bush, and though, in the course of the novel, it will become a showpiece for the New Africa, the gimcrack design of its buildings and the tenacious habits of the natives make it certain that the bush will once again return. The site literally represents but a bend in the river of Africa itself, whose inevitable flow is at present clogged by the water hyacinths that float up from the South and on down to the sea.

Salim and his shop mark the changes that stir Africa. He buys it cheaply after the riots that followed independence in which statues were smashed "to get rid of the old, to wipe out the memory of the intruder. It was unnerving, the depth of the African rage, the wish to destroy, regardless of consequences."

Business slowly resumes; the people emerge from their refuge in the forest, and a ramshackle order reasserts itself. Then the demand for copper from the mines to the South creates a boom; land values shoot up; the former colonial domain becomes a concrete-and-glass centre of technology, and the town has its international agencies and its Bigburger outlet.

It also feels the power of the Big Man, the life-time president far away in the capital downriver. As his photograph gets bigger, he plays off one set of people against another, breaking down the old tribal loyalties and warrior codes:

"The flag and the president's portrait were only like their fetishes, the sources of their authority. They didn't see, these young men, that there was anything to build in their country. As far as they were concerned, it was all there already. They had only to take."

Having broken the old bonds, the Big Man must face new insurgents. The town is again filled with violence: its inhabitants become "citoyens," and the president holds on by quasi-religious self-advertisement and by appropriating foreign properties. Under that radicalization program, Salim's shop becomes the property of Citizen Theo, an illiterate mechanic. Salim must "get out" before the president's bullies discover that foreigners are like everybody else.

For the ordinary African there is no longer a place to hide: "It's a nightmare. All those airfields the man has built, the foreign companies have built — nowhere is safe now." And for the foreigners, the neighboring African states are in ferment and Europe has grown "shrunken and mean and forbidding."

These political conflicts also find echoes in Salim's relationship with each of his friends.

Indar, his rich companion from the days on the Coast, turns up again as a lecturer at the Domain, but his term there ends when the outside world grows embarassed by the president and can no longer believe in its own synthetic programs for the New Africa. He, too, ties to run; "There is some dream village in his head," but he has no real home to run to.

Raymond, who had once been the president's European adviser, has outgrown his usefulness, yet pathetically waits for his return to favor. His wife, unable to believe in those ambitions, turns to Salim, and together they find temporary stability and forgetfulness in physical pleasure.

Mahesh, the Bigburger king, fares somewhat better; having guessed how events would turn out, he had already Africanized his business on his own terms. But his insecurity is dramatized by his wife's psychotic conviction that her beauty has been disfigured.

Most telling of all is the failure of Salim's relationship with Ali, a former slave of the family. He has promised to protect him, but is powerless to do so: "I can hardly arrange these things for myself." In a world of visas and passports, the old social contracts fall apart.

A Bend in the River is an astonishing account of today's Africa seen through the eyes of one who, like the continent itself, has been exiled from his roots and his past.

For all its complexity, Naipaul's narrative has the taut strength and suggestiveness of poetry, and its haunting power creates an extraordinary picture of the tyranny of man.

'Simply grittiest, truest novel in years'

Although there are at least 50 ways to leave your lover, they all come down to one simple action: closing your door. Or opening it: to a new place, a new life.

And perhaps to a new lover, too.

For Vicky — Victoria — Ferris, the heroine (horrible 19th century word!) of Crossings, her new lover is Mik, the proto-typical west coast primitive, unbelievable larger-than-life logger, ex-con, beautiful and brutal, a man who, besides loving her physically, also provides Vicky with his own unshakable style of affirmation of what she is trying to do and who she is trying to become. A man who, in the end, joins Vicky's husband Ben on the outs — because Vicky is clear at least about what she doesn't want: another man (anyway not for long), another life with a man.

Crossings is her attempt to detail those ways and to find her own way free from the maze her relationships with the men in her life.

Crossings is Betty Lambert's first novel, and it would be impossible to shout all its strengths here. Lambert, a highly successful Canadian writer of plays for children, has simply written the grittiest, truest novel this or any country has seen in years.

Lambert's talents as a dramatist are evident throughout the novel: pages and pages of rapid scene change and dialogue that reveal more than any prolix self-examination or extraneous comment just how Victoria Ferris feels about herself and her life and the people she lives her life with.

In contrast to much feminist fiction (to use a highly inaccurate phrase) and fiction written by men with at least as big an axe to grind, all the characters in Crossings are immediately recognizable as human beings possessed of the same range of qualities that we all share. Thus, though some readers may think otherwise, someone like Mik has real value; and Lambert's evocation of Vicky's love affair with him is surely one of the most beautiful inspirations in recent fiction.

Of course, we all have warts and scars, and barely healed burns, and sores that refuse to stop bleeding just because we want to look nice for someone we want to impress.

So everyone — but everyone! — in this novel might be seen as someone you wouldn't want to see in a mirror or relate to for five minutes, let alone stick with for 284 pages of relentless prose. But you do, as their story insists on its telling.

But apart from a passing mention of his death — which happened when she was five or nine, she's unclear — Vicky makes absolutely no reference to her father or to her relationship with him — perhaps a deliberate omission. In a time when many, if not most, women are finding it extremely difficult to relate to men in general and to a man in particular, their early relationship with their father deserves at least as much attention as their relationship with their mother.

And finally (for which bless it, too) there is absolutely no point to Crossings — no judgments or moral truths inscribed on plastic tablets dispensed by rubber dolls.

"I thought," Vicky confesses, "truth was something you could work out, like the logarithms upon which a slide rule is premised . . ."

Not true, of course. Only lives are there, only your own life is there. Do they make any sense, does yours? — W.K.

E. D. WARD-HARRIS

As is usual at this time of year, new books are rolling in apace and lack of space precludes the mention of all but a few. With important new works inevitably displacing those of even slightly lesser merit, a snowball effect occurs which, if one isn't careful, relegates a book that should be noticed, for a positive or negative reason, to obscurity as far as reviewing is concerned. The only remedy is to resort from time to time to the grouping system.

I alluded briefly in a recent review to The Weimar Chronicle, by Alex de Jonge (Random House; $16.95) but I think a further word is called for. A surprisingly large number of people telescope recent German history into three periods — the First World War and the fall of the Kaiser, the Hitler years and the Second World War, and the current years of division, with West Germany attaining respectability under Konrad Adenauer and his successors and East Germany becoming an entity within the Soviet bloc. Few give a thought to the missing years — 1918 to 1933 — the years of the ill-fated Weimar Republic.

Born in a pervasive atmosphere of defeat and despair, the Weimar Republic, which no one really wanted, least of all its leaders, was too weak and disunited to cope with all the crises it faced: constant clashes between republican, Communist and right-wing forces; Allied occupation; runaway inflation and economic collapse; and an incredible degree of moral abandon. The Germany of the day was so bankrupt that it welcomed its own passing and delightedly gave Adolf Hitler the responsibility for bringing about a rebirth.

For normally level-headed Germans to elect Hitler and his thugs to power doesn't make sense unless the immediate background is known and understood, and Alex de Jonge, who has always been fascinated by the Germany of the 1920s, is a marvellous guide to the social history of the period. Writing as a chronicler rather than a historian, he has produced a vivid collage of voices culled from eyewitness accounts, diary extracts, newspaper reports and personal memoirs.

Capturing brilliantly, on the one hand, the violence, despair, listlessness, and ever-present shadow of Hitler, and on the other hand the humor, crudity and abandoned gaiety of Berlin's theatres and cabarets, this Oxford historian evokes the period better than Christopher Isherwood ever did and succeeds, as Isherwood did not, in presenting a well-rounded and moving portrait of a well-meaning democratic republic that never had a chance.

* * *

Martin Bormann, the shadowy figure who manipulated Hitler, is not alive and well and living in South America, as that rascal Ladislas Farago led us to believe in his 1974 book, Aftermath. He was killed by an exploding tank whilst trying to escape from Berlin in the dying days of the Third Reich. That is the most dramatic revelation in The Secretary, by Jochen von Lang (Random House; $21).

The book is a detailed account of an exceptionally nasty piece of work who rose from obscurity to become Hitler's secretary and most loyal comrade. Despite the Teutonic style, only slightly moderated by the translators, the book is essential reading for avid students of the Third Reich. For the general reader, the book's interest lies in the rather chilling case history of how an evil-minded bureaucrat with a desire for power and a will to succeed can rise to the top — and how easy it would be for another Bormann to repeat the exercise in another country today.

Many people buy books hurriedly on the strength of a title or an author's name and are frequently disappointed by the contents. Such people have only themselves to blame. Books, like paintings, antiques, and fine wine, should be chosen with care, each purchase being a ceremony, thus ensuring the savoring and celebration of a newly-acquired trophy.

Those who thoughtlessly buy Early Man and the Ocean, by Thor Heyerdahl (Doubleday; $16.50) in the belief that it is a sequel to Kon-Tiki, Aku-Aku, the Ra Expeditions, or Fatu-Hiva — another travelogue of personal adventures — will be sadly mistaken. It is in fact an anthology of previously published reports and speeches which were never easily accessible to the layman. They represent a sort of intellectual halfway house between Heyerdayl's travel books and scientific volumes and the weighty archaeological tomes in libraries and museums, the dust on which is rarely if ever disturbed, even by scientists.

Early Man and the Ocean demands intense concentration and is certainly not a book to interest the casual reader, but anyone fascinated by Heyerdahl's pioneering work in the implications about the role of deep-sea navigation in the spread of culture throughout the ancient world will find this work challenging, exciting, and richly rewarding.

* * *

Speaking of buying books in haste and repenting at leisure, let me provide a couple of examples of how easy it is to waste time and money.

At first glance The Wandering Gorillas, by Alan Goodall (Collins; $17.95) looks most inviting, not so much because of the title but because of the author's name. Is it her husband? you wonder. No, of course, it can't be. Well, it's probably a brother. Anyway, gorillas and Goodall — how can you go wrong? Easily, my friends, easily.

Alan is unrelated to the famous Jane in every way. Although he now has a PhD after his name (his book is in fact his doctoral thesis) he gives every appearance of being an amiable enthusiastic amateur. His ethological mission in Africa reads more like a description of an inconsequential safari. He lacks the cool, scientific approach of the trained professional observer and, in my opinion, fails to establish a believability bond between himself and his readers. Being an indifferent sort of writer doesn't help either.

Alan Goodall is no fool, He knows enough to genuflect to the late Louis Leakey and to take the customary academic swipe at poor old Robert Ardrey, and he was astute enough to win the backing of the late Sir William Collins for his projected book. But the fact remains that if you want to know how gorillas behave in the wild you still have to read the works of George Schaller and Dian Fossey.

* * *

Being in a protective mood, I feel I should also warn you to be wary of Arthur Bryant, by Pamela Street (Collins; $19.95).

The book's title is liable to attract the interest of the admirers of the works (more than 40) of one of Britain's outstanding historians and perhaps lure them into buying the book in hopes of reading a critical assessment. Those who do so are in for an unpleasant surprise.

Bryant was a friend of the late A. G. Street, the novelist, and when the latter's daughter, Pamela, wrote a biography of her father, Sir Arthur consented to contribute a Foreword. Years and years later, Pamela was hired by the elderly Bryant for a brief period as a "personal assistant," in reality a "go-fer". On the strength of this she has written what purports to be a study of the life and character of her temporary employer.

She tells us that Bryant has always thrived on hard work, always took on too many commitments and always met his deadlines — all of which is well known and not all that interesting. Throw in a few idiosyncrasies, a lot of adulation, and generous helpings of quotations from Bryant's own work, and you have a pot-pourri that is about as unenlightening as it could be. The book wasted my time; don't allow it to waste yours.

So much for some of the non-fiction that has piled up on my desk. Next week, I'll deal with some of the current novels that deserve mention and are in danger of being passed over in favor of some interesting work that is clamoring for attention.

Prose aside, Miller biography first-rate

By RALPH B. SIPPER

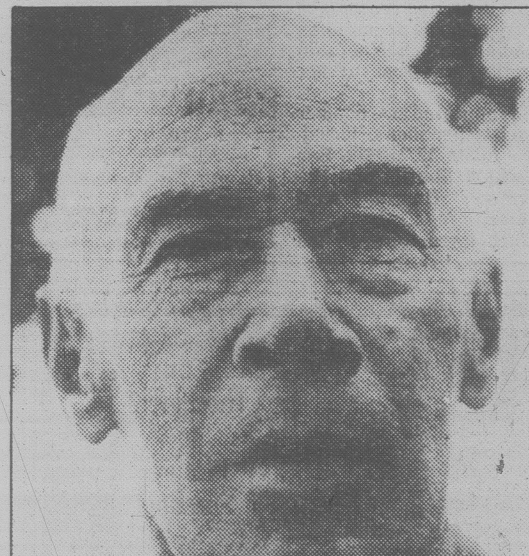
"I have no money, no resources, no hopes. I am the happiest man alive." These lines from Tropic of Cancer — exuberant, contradictory, outrageous — identify the singular character of Henry Miller, still larger than life in his 87th year and the grudgingly accepting subject of this comprehensive biography.

Having received only minimal, co-operation from Miller and eschewing or being denied the help of his family and surviving friends, Jay Martin moled his way through 100,000 pages of manuscripts and letters buried in institutional or private collections scattered throughout the country to bring this 560-page opus out into the light. Considering the lonely digging he had to do, it is a first-rate job of research and organization — thorough and balanced.

However, he made one unfortunate choice in the presentation of his materials: Attempting to breathe life into the book, Martin adopted the voice and tone of Miller's own narrator of his autobiographical romances.

Competing with Miller's, as it were, Martin's prose becomes excessive.

The irony is that Martin is a more-than-competent writer when he sticks to his role as biographer and leaves out the pyrotechnics. The story of Miller's life needs no jazzing up, chugging along nicely enough on its own energy.



MILLER . . . in Paris, even his shadow was warm

It is a life that began badly and continued so for many years. Miller grew up in a bourgeois setting, dominated by a nagging, perfection-demanding mother whom he could never please. As the years slid by, he drifted in a stultifying circle of dreary jobs, unemployment and sinecures.

In 1930, at the end of his emotional rope, Miller left America, where he always felt alien, and moved to Paris and for the first time found outlets for his prodigious energies. Then in his forties and penniless most of the time, he had found not only himself but his unique voice. In those days, as someone said, his friends walked in his shadow and even his shadow was warm.

With the onset of the Second World War, Miller returned to America, still broke but with an enviable critical following. There was talk of a Nobel Prize. He settled in Big Sur and became a passionate and accomplished painter, turning out watercolors by the hundred. In 1961 with the censorship battle over Tropic of Cancer won, he was world-famous.

Martin has meticulously documented all this and much more. He has caught the spirit of Miller's work without straining for an all-inclusive critical theory. He has accomplished what any literary biographer might wish for — to illuminate the work through an understanding of the man.

Big-eyed blonde funny, foxy and fierce

By DICK MAURICE

Goldie Hawn's funny, foxy and fierce.

Yes, everybody's favorite big-eyed, bubble-headed, pert-figured blonde is incorrigibly wacky. But, as celebrity interviewer Dick Maurice discovers, Goldie can also be serious — about her work, her success and her life.

A revealing look at a complicated lady who, according to one male co-star, is the rare woman who can make you laugh, cry, and love her all at once!

MAURICE: Goldie, with out a doubt you are probably best remembered for being on "Laugh-In." How did the character, the dumb blone, come about?

HAWN: I was hired to be a "Laugh-In" dancer. That's what I was, a dancer.

But of course I had lines, we all did. And rehearsing I'd try to read from the cue cards, which I'd never done, and I'd stutter and break up.

George Schlatter, the producer, he loved it. Then George started snapping his fingers and waving off camera, to make me do it, and this character developed.

In one way, I'm like her. I can be . . . peripheral.

MAURICE: In what ways are you like the character, Jill, that you played in "Shampoo?"

HAWN: Did you notice, I'm the only one in the movie that Warren never goes to bed with?

You know, it's funny. I remember when I was growing up I would be at a school dance and sit with all the other girls who didn't have dates. No one asked me to dance. I hung around the ladies' room all night.

When I came home, I fell on my bed and cried. My mother came in and held me like a little baby. "Don't worry, Goldie, it'll be all right. You're just a little late, that's all."

MAURICE: What's Goldie Hawn's biggest fear?

HAWN: My biggest problem and fear is how to protect myself from people who want to know me, without wanting to know me. They only want to use me, to become part of what I represent. Not what I am.

MAURICE: Do you have the problem of people coming up to you and annoying you?

HAWN: People hardly ever recognize me. I like it that way. I don't like to be recognized and bothered.

MAURICE: I'm seeing a serious side of you. Most people thik of you as being silly.

HAWN: The silliness is just a part of me. So sure, I can be silly at home, too, and I often am.

HAWN: Somehow a person who likes to laugh out loud and to make other people laugh is thought to be dumb, shallow and not particularly feminine. I've never understood the connection between one and the other.

I am also feminine. Women must be real and they must also be feminine. I can also be a little evil.

MAURICE: What was the toughest thing when you first started out in show business?

HAWN: The first clubs were the toughest, the worst dives you can imagine, real Mafia places. My first week on the job I fainted.

MAURICE: What do you think of Hollywood?

HAWN: Hollywood is the cruelest place on Earth. Values are incredibly bad. People are too easy. Money is too easy.

People are vicious. They smile at you and stab you in the back. You can't confide in anyone. And the most successful people never grow. Their egos are weird. That's why we never go to Hollywood parties.

People are phony and stilted. They stare at each other and go off with a different person every night. It's disgusting.

And people are so cold. They never make a real, deep commitment to each other.

MAURICE: Is Goldie Hawn happy?

HAWN: For the first time, my life is the way I want it. I enjoy my family — and my work. I love to cook and garden and do homey things. We even take Sunday drives along the gorgeous coast, when I think how silly it is to make movies.

There's a dozen good things I could do. Unlike other stars, I had a happy childhood. I don't need adulation.

What I want most is to create an atmosphere of love and freedom for my children that I had when I was a child. If I do that, then I'll feel I accomplished something special.

By JOHN BOGERT

But even he, taking dead aim at everyone on the "Mork and Mindy" set, making fun of the director's shortness, the prop man's slowness, takes it easy around this venerable woman.

Kerr says the respect between them is mutual and that the depth of Williams' talent has flabbergasted her during their short relationship.

"On top of that, he's a wonderful person," she says, speaking in an accent that, despite her long and varied experience, still smacks of her rural past.

Actually, the respect this young cast and crew have for Mindy's grandma probably stems from the fact that she is indeed a fine woman.

After all, who couldn't respect a woman who in 1944, with her family grown, took to acting in amateur shows in Pasadena? And who, in only one year, managed to make it to Broadway?

The odd thing about this career, the thing that separates her from all the hustling young performers in town, is the fact that she never meant to do any of it.

In fact, she already had lived several other lives by the time she walked onto stage for the second time, 26 years after her first and only other performance in a college production.

Her husband of 35 years had come West to head a large training program during the war and, since her two boys were both well on their way to their Ph.D's, she thought she'd give acting a whirl.

"It all happened so fast. If someone had told me when I was 40 that I'd be doing this today, I never would have believed them."

In her spare time she read dozens of plays and novels and, when they'd visit New York, she'd sometimes see five or six plays in three days.

"I think I was preparing myself for what was to come, though I had no idea I was. When we owned the newspaper during the Depression years, I often was invited to women's clubs to do readings of book reviews. It was a different time.

"Still, that sort of thing can prepare you for the stage, or, at least, keep you in training."

When her husband died in 1970, she gave up her career and went off to England alone. Intending to stay a few months, she stayed three years, touring the continent and thoroughly enjoying herself.

An illness in the family brought her back to Los Angeles in 1973, "but by the time I arrived, things were again in order and I no longer was needed."

So, faced with nothing much to do, and encouraged by friends, she acquired an agent and, much to her own surprise, was soon on her way.

She appeared on a number of television shows, including "Adam 12," "The Bob Newhart Show" and the films, "Coma" and "Spree."

Then there were all the commercials she was asked to do, followed by the realization that she was virtually alone in her field.

"When you get to my age, there isn't a lot of competition. In fact, each day there is less and less competition," she says smiling.

"One of the truly nice things about this business is that nobody will retire you because of your age. As long as you can say your lines, you can work.

"With me, I never asked for a part, went out looking for one or ever expected to get one, so everything that has come my way has been pure velvet."

In fact, she says the parts are getting better and better, "and one thing does, in fact, lead to another."
